Pro-Japanese Boycott Committee Formed In Tientsin

PICKETS WILL PREVENT SALE OF BRITISH GOODS

TOKYO, July 20.
MEASURES for the boycott of British goods were formulated to-day by the anti-British boycott campaign committee in Tientsin, according to a Japanese despatch.

The measures include picketing and the appointment of special agents to popularise the boycott.

The pickets would urge firms and warehouses to suspend sales of British articles, but compensation would be paid for loss of trade.

The committee recommends organisation of special control over sales and purchases of British goods.—Reuter.

BOMBING OF CIVILIANS

LONDON, July 20.—Mr. Arthur Henderson asked in the House of Commons to-day if the Government would enquire whether any government, with representative in China, have now obtained full information regarding cases of bombardment by Japanese aircraft of civilians; whether such information has now been sent to the League Council in accordance with its resolution of May 1939; and whether the British representative on the Council will ask for its publication forthwith.

DEBATE ON PALESTINE Government Plan Is Attacked

LONDON, July 20.
A DEBATE on the Palestine problem was initiated in the House of Commons to-day by Mr. Tom Williams (Labour), who said that a further blow had been struck at Jewish aspirations by the suspension of immigration.

The complete cessation of immigration meant that the hopes of tens of thousands of people all over Europe were completely dashed. The Government scheme had completely broken down, and there was neither legal, moral nor ethical right for it.

Contrary To Justice

Neither Mr. MacDonald nor anybody else could superimpose on an unwilling people a policy contrary to justice and fair play, and every compromise made in the last 20 years. It wasn't too late to go back to the mandate and to encourage Arabs and Jews to co-operate as they did hitherto. Maybe some form of federation was possible, where Arab fear of domination could be completely liquidated, and where the Jews might have further opportunities. Sir Arnold Wilson suggested that the problem could not be solved without bearing in mind that Palestine was merely the southern half of Syria. Syria as a whole should be covered by the federation of one Jewish State, one Christian, and three Arab States, working in harmony under the British and French, or Anglo-French supervision, subject to a measure of control by the League of Nations.

Nobody Satisfied

Mr. G. le M. Mander said that Mr. MacDonald's policy satisfied nobody in Palestine, and he suggested that Mr. MacDonald consider referring the Government policy to the consideration of the Permanent Court of International Justice.

Mr. Duff Cooper said that the British policy was consistently trying to give absolute impartial treatment to both Jew and Arab, and to fulfil pledges. It was a good policy, but one proof of its failure was that because illegal immigration had succeeded, legal immigration was to be stopped. A stronger and more definite line was required.

The first consideration when two old friends came to ask for assistance was to decide which had the greater need. Mr. Duff Cooper then contrasted the position of the Arabs, who since the war had enjoyed greater prosperity and freedom than they had known for centuries, with the plight of the Jews, who, in a long and tragic history, had never

PLEASE Turn To Page 4.

Mr. R. A. Butler said that Viscount Halifax had received no reports on this subject from the League Secretariat.

He recalled that, at the time the resolution was adopted, the British Government, in common with other governments represented on the Council, agreed that reports received by the Council should be published provided the government furnishing them raised no objection.—Reuter.

Tokyo Talks Continue

TOKYO, July 21.—The third conversation between the Foreign Minister, Mr. Arita, and the British Ambassador, Sir Robert Craigie, regarding the Tientsin situation, will take place at the official residence of the Foreign Minister this afternoon. Political circles attach much importance to to-day's meeting, during which they understand it will be made clear whether the alleged discrepancies between Japan and Britain are insuperable or not.

It is understood that there were several outstanding points on which the negotiations failed to agree in the second session of the conversations on Wednesday.—Domei.

French Envoy Calls On Ambassador

TOKYO, July 21.—The French Ambassador to Japan, Mr. Arsene Henry, called on Sir Robert Craigie, the British Ambassador, at 11 a.m. yesterday. They remained in conference for half-an-hour.

It is understood that the French envoy sought information from Ambassador Craigie regarding the Anglo-Japanese negotiations for a settlement of the Tientsin issue.—Domei.

Anti-British Measures

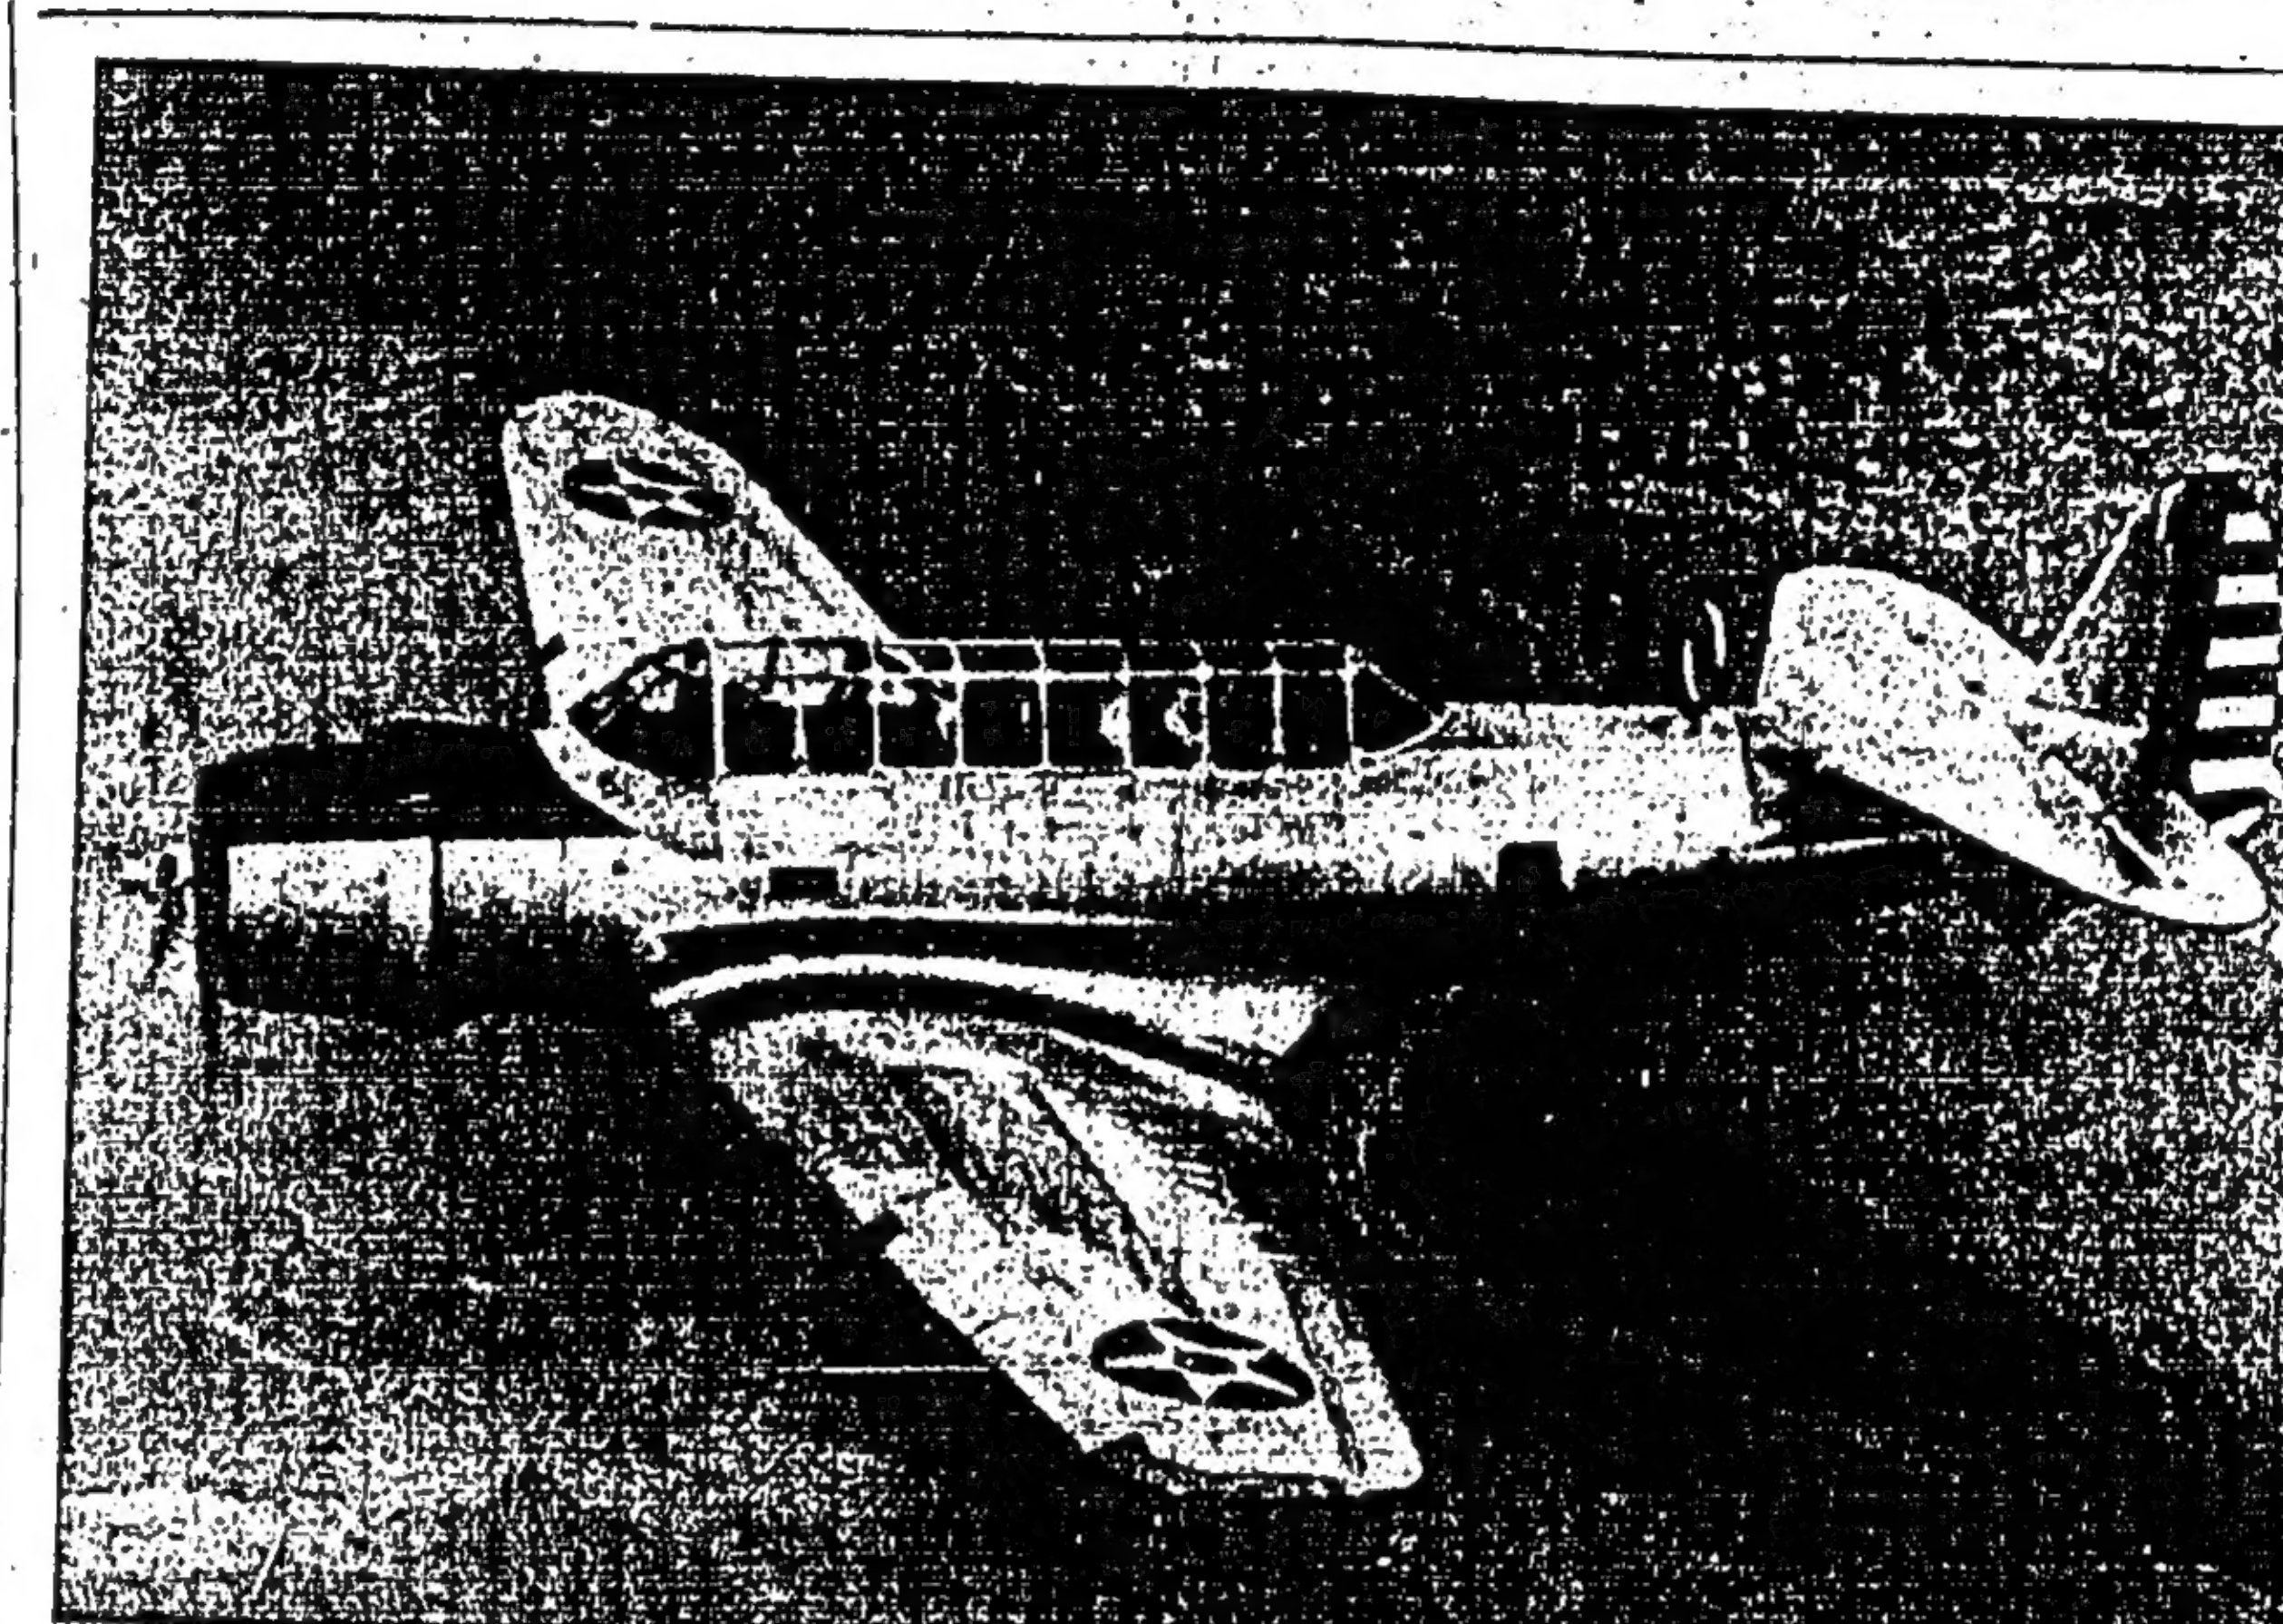

PEIPING, July 21.
Steadily gaining momentum, the anti-British movement in Peiping and Tientsin threaten to develop into a complete boycott of Britons and British goods.

The Japanese-controlled Special Municipal Government of Peiping on Thursday summoned representatives of all circles concerned to determine practicable measures for boycotting British interests by individuals, merchants and public bodies, while the anti-British campaign committee at Tientsin has also decided to start a vigorous agitation on Sunday.

According to the decisions taken by the Peiping Municipal authorities yesterday, individual Chinese citizens are urged not to use British currency, not to buy from British merchants, to refuse employment by Britons or co-operation with British interests. Chinese merchants are requested to register through guild agents the British goods in their possession, to refrain from laying in fresh stocks of British goods, and to cancel all outstanding contracts with British interests.

Public bodies are asked to co-operate for the execution of the individual boycott and also to dis-

LONDON, July 20.
AFTER 14 DAYS of searching enquiry, the Thetis tribunal adjourned to-day. It will meet formally on July 27 to fix a date for the renewal of the hearing.

DOLLAR CRASHES TO 4d.

SHANGHAI, July 21.
THE CHINESE dollar made another sensational drop at the opening of the Shanghai Market this morning.

Compared with yesterday's rates of between 4 1/2d. and 4 3/4d., the dollar was quoted at 3.30 o'clock this morning at 4d., the lowest rate in its history. Quotation against U.S. dollars was 7 1/2 cents.

The market is considerably weak.—United Press.

Demand For Gold

SHANGHAI, July 20.—The prices of gold bullion soared skyward in the local market to-day as holders of Chinese dollars endeavoured to find a way out of the precipitous legal tender into the bullion market.

Starting from $3,300 at the opening quotations, gold bullion rose to $3,600, $3,700, $3,800 and $3,900 during a single day.

The exchange quotations of the Chinese dollar which for a moment stood at 4 1/2d. on London and 8 1/2 cents on New York, were later swept by the bullion whirlwind and the closing quotations declined to 4 1/2d. on London and 9 and 8 1/2 cents on New York.

Dutch Consul To Go To Rio

THE HAGUE, July 20.—The appointment of M. Daniels, former Netherlands Consul-General in Singapore, to the post of Minister at Rio de Janeiro will shortly be announced, says a semi-official report.

Mr. Daniels is at present in the Foreign Office, and is a specialist on the question of emigration.

Professor J. S. Haldane to-day expressed the opinion that air conditions in a submarine might be improved by carrying soda lime to absorb the poisoned air in an emergency.

He also expressed the opinion that if the men had breathed oxygen three-quarters of an hour before going into the escape chamber, they would have experienced no difficulty in escaping.

Describing another experiment, Professor Haldane said he had got four friends who were former members of the International Brigade fighting in Spain to go into a chamber in order to see whether other people reacted similarly to himself.

Same Conditions

The chamber corresponded to the atmospheric conditions of the Thetis a little before 10 o'clock on the morning of the second day, said Professor Haldane.

"One man was sitting on the floor with his head in his hands, panicking and saying he was feeling very bad. 'He was prepared to go on longer, but I did not want to make him ill. 'People find it quite difficult even to stand under these conditions. There is a certain lack of control of language, and one writes things down in a rather stupid manner. 'One cannot think the problem out at all, and there is a very marked effect on the mental faculties."

Insensibility

Describing the last sensations of the doomed men, Professor Haldane said they would be something akin to the feelings after a strenuous physical exertion. The men would gradually become less and less sensible.

He had never seen anybody suffering from the effects of the same type of poisoning, having convulsions and throwing themselves about, or anything of that sort. It was not a sensation accompanied by acute pain.—Reuter.

Future Trials

LONDON, July 20.—In the House of Commons to-day, Mr. Geoffrey Shakerpeare replying to a question, said that in future, a minimum number of contractor's employees would be carried in a submarine engaged in diving trials.

The captain of the submarine would be held responsible for seeing that only the minimum number of persons above the submarine's complement remained aboard for such trials.—Reuter.

JAPANESE LAND AT SWABUE

FOLLOWING two abortive attempts earlier this week, Japanese marines have succeeded in landing at Swabue, the important port 70 miles north-east of Hongkong.

The landing was effected under a withering barrage from warships and bombing planes.

The Chinese defenders put up considerable resistance, and succeeded in holding off the Japanese for three hours after they landed.

The bombardment, however, completely crumbled the Chinese defences, and at 1.30 p.m. the Chinese withdrew to new lines. The Japanese are now reported to be advancing from Swabue to Yuiwei, about eight miles from Hofung.

Only a few British and other foreign residents are at Swabue, which is the centre of an important mining district.

Congressmen Want To Go Home

WASHINGTON, July 20.—Leaders of the House of Representatives have made tentative plans to sidetrack the Japanese embargo Bills in order to adjourn as soon as possible because it is evident that the embargo measure will meet with strong opposition in both the House and Senate.

Representative Sol Bloom to-day told the "United Press" that the House Foreign Affairs Committee's attitude is not determined. He said the situation is extremely complex with its different bills pending, none of which has satisfied the majority of House members.

He added that the embargo measures are "clouded with dynamite" but did not indicate whether he is personally opposed to any of them.—United Press.

Danzig, Nazi Leaders to Confer

BERLIN, July 20.
IT IS understood that Hitler is scheduled to reconsider, with the Danzig and Nazi leaders at Berchtesgaden next week, what is popularly termed the "Hitler plan" for the peaceful solution of the various problems.

The plan is supposed to envisage the question of Danzig independently from that of the Polish corridor.

Hitler is at present at Berchtesgaden with his intimate advisers.

The general view here is that the situation is not materially altered, that military preparations are proceeding, and that the peace plan reports have been brought into evidence by the desire of all parties for some sort of compromise which is emphasised by the press restraint in handling the Danzig Polish shooting incident.—United Press.

May Denounce Accord

ROME, July 20.—The Italian Government contemplated denouncing the Anglo-Italian Agreement of April 18, 1938, local political quarters claimed to-day.

They based their declarations partly on an article published in the "Giornale d'Italia," which is edited by Signor Virginio Gayda and generally regarded as Signor Benito Mussolini's mouthpiece.

Signor Gayda referred to the recent "freezing" of Anglo-Italian relations, basing his article on foreign press commentaries about the nomination of Count Dino Grandi, Italian envoy in London, to the post of Minister of Justice.

He wrote, "They talk of a change in Italy's attitude towards Britain. But that is incorrect."

"It is Britain who, since 1935, has reversed her policy towards Italy, substituting aggressive hostility and incomprehension for friendship and understanding."

"Italy will draw direct conclusions from this change in attitude at the opportune moment."

"Italy is determined to defend her rights and will pursue her course together with her true friends—whatever may happen."—Havas.

London Comment On Article

LONDON, July 15.—Commenting on rumours of possible Italian denunciation of the Anglo-Italian Accord of April 18, 1938, British quarters pointed out to-day that the agreement had already, for a long while, existed only in theory.

Nevertheless, they stressed, Britain would certainly not take the initiative towards denouncing the treaty, for it would leave Italy free to resume liberty of action.

Rome, too, understood this, but it was improbable that it should believe taking the initiative would be in its interests, the same quarters said.—Havas.

Danzig Apologises

WARSAW, July 20.—The Danzig Senate is reported to have expressed regret to the Polish Commissioner for the shooting of Customs official named Budziewicz.

According to the Polish official version, a Danzig Customs official, accompanied by two members of the local organisation, crossed the frontier this morning and met Budziewicz, who ordered them to halt.

One of the Nazis fired and killed Budziewicz on the spot.

The Danzig press maintains that the shooting occurred in a Danzig territory, but the Polish official version categorically declares that Budziewicz was shot nine yards from the frontier on the Polish side.—Reuter.

Germans Object To Propaganda

LONDON, July 20.
ACCORDING to the "Evening Standard," Sir Neville Henderson, British Ambassador to Berlin, has requested the British Government to use its influence to induce Commander Stephen King-Hall to desist from his propaganda in Germany by means of news-letters, which he sends to all parts of the world, and which recently formed the subject of a biting six-column attack by Dr. Josef Goebbels in the German press.

The paper asserts that the Ambassador pointed out that propaganda of this nature rendered his own position very difficult, and that its cessation was an indispensable condition of any improvement in Anglo-German relations.

The paper also claims that from this, some cabinet members draw the inference that Sir Neville Henderson still believes in the possibility of a revival of the appeasement policy.—Trans-Ocean.

HANDSOME GIGOLOS WERE "MENACE TO THE CITY"

And Lonely Ladies Are Left Forlorn

NEW YORK HAS LOST ITS "SOCIAL ESCORTS"—HANDSOME YOUNG MEN WITH NICE MANNERS WHO WOULD, FOR A FEE, HIT THE HIGH SPOTS WITH LONELY LADIES WITH MONEY TO SPEND.

Ted Peckham, 24-years-old United States university graduate, who started a bureau to put the handsome young men and the lonely ladies in touch, has been denounced as "a menace to the city and to visitors" by Justice William R. Bayes, who found him guilty of operating an employment agency without a licence.

He fined him $50, forbade him to supply any more escorts until he gets a licence, and gave him a suspended sentence of three months in the workhouse (a modified American form of imprisonment).

As it was the Licence Commissioner Paul Moss who led the exposure of his methods in court, it seems unlikely that Peckham will get his licence.

"We have been trying to stamp out this social service evil for the last four years," Moss told the court in New York.

"They send out escorts without investigation, and send them to women whom they have not investigated. Women who are overcharged are afraid to go to court because of the publicity."

Two of the witnesses against Peckham were formerly escorts.

One, handsome young policeman Thomas Farrell, who concealed his identity to get into Peckham's service, told how he received an order to take a woman to the theatre and dinner.

"Peckham's secretary," he related, "told me I would get four dollars out of the ten-dollar ($2) fee for working from 4 p.m. to 8 p.m."

"If the lady kept me later the fee would be ten dollars from 8 p.m. until midnight, and five dollars for every two hours after that. I was to get two-fifths of all fees."

COULDN'T GET FEES

"I met the lady at the Hotel Astor and she gave me ten dollars for expenses. We went to the theatre and had a couple of drinks. I spent nearly four dollars in expenses and returned the balance."

The next day, said Farrell, he had trouble in collecting the fee from Peckham.

Another witness, Charles L. Sealy, who spoke with an English accent, said he also had difficulty in collecting his fee.

London knows Mr. Peckham very well, because it was in November 1936 that he arrived to start a branch of his business, the London Social Escort Bureau.

By December he had 30 personable young men working for him, accompanying lonely ladies to dinner, theatres, dances, receiving a proportion of the fees handed over.

Soon he was reporting it a success, but by the following September he was bewailing the fact that English girls refused to pay for male escorts.

"GO GETTERS"

"English girls are 'go-getters' and don't have to hire a friend for the evening," he said, "they know the sort of young man they want and see that they find him."

He said then that he had branches

Latest controversial sculpture by American-born Jacob Epstein is inspected by an art critic at Leicester Galleries, London. Women have screamed at it, while critics shake their heads. Its name is "Adam."

Later in the month, Mr. Peckham arrived in New York with the announcement that seven British peers had signed to appear as a chorus in a New York revue.

In London, the peers mentioned indignantly denied the suggestion.

Byron Tomb Opened

WAS it really the body of the poet Byron that the British frigate brought home from Greece more than a century ago? Did the Greeks, for whose independence Byron died fighting, retain their hero's heart and brain?

For many years these questions have remained unanswered—for many years the persistent legend worried the vicar of Hucknall, Nottinghamshire, the Rev. T. G. Barber, in whose church the poet was buried 114 years ago.

His opportunity came when matters of archaeological interest had to be probed in that part of his ancient church where Byron was buried.

Consent of the Home Office and the present Lord Byron had to be obtained and all the witnesses were pledged to secrecy.

The work was carried out with the utmost reverence.

EMBALMED

It took some time for the workmen to open the vault. Descending into it after tests were made to prove the safety of the air, the vicar found an urn inside.

"Within this urn are deposited the heart and brain of the deceased Lord Noel Byron."

Close to it was a leaden case in which was the coffin with the body of Byron himself. The leaden case had been torn open and the lid of the coffin was loose.

"I raised the lid," says the vicar, "and saw the embalmed body of Byron, in as perfect a condition as when it was placed in the coffin 114 years ago."

Ate Four Ounces Of Arsenic—Lived

AHMEDABAD.

KAY KHUSHRAV BARJORJI VAKIL, Parsee youth aged 20, did this to prove his faith in Zoroaster, the prophet by whom Parsees swear: he swallowed four ounces of arsenic, enough, it is stated, to kill 900 people, and lived.

He swallowed the arsenic at a gathering of Parsees, Hindus and Moslems, having previously publicly announced that he would either take a large dose of poison, pour molten lead over his body or hang himself by a rope and survive owing to his belief in the Zoroastrian religion.

Mr. Vakil distributed to the gathering a quantity of what he ate, with a view to proving that it really was arsenic that he was to swallow.

After explaining the importance of Zoroastrianism, he took the poison, and in case the gathering might suspect that he was taking an antidote he threw away a glass of water which was offered to him.

The result of an analysis of the Arsenic by Dr. M. S. Shah, Professor of Chemistry, Gujarat College, Ahmedabad, showed that what Mr. Vakil swallowed was 99.749 arsenical.

"ALL COULD DO IT"

In an interview Mr. Vakil stated that what he achieved was "entirely due to his great faith in Zoroastrianism."

Any person, he added who was "zealous to imitate the doctrines of this religion could perform the feats of which I am capable."

Zoroastrianism was the religion of the Persian people before they became converted to Mohammedanism. The faith preached by the prophet Zoroaster (or Zarathustra) is a dualism teaching that Ormazd, lord of light and goodness, carries on ceaseless war against Ahriman, and the hosts of evil spirits who dwell in darkness. Ormazd created man to aid him, and eventually the belief was—the good kingdom will be attained.

He Wants Lion Farm By Thames

NEXT spring Mr. Stanley Turpin, of Sandhills Meadows, Shepperton, hopes to open the first lion-breeding farm in England. If he finds the trade to circuses and zoos justifies it, he will stock his estate up to 300 animals. The farm is to be on a 12-acre estate near the Thames.

Mr. Turpin has had no experience in breeding lions, but is confident he can manage them. He has just returned after a three years' tour of South Africa and proposes to join forces with an experienced lion breeder now on his way from Africa.

Sunbury Council have refused to approve his scheme, but Mr. Turpin says that they have no power to stop him.

He said: "I am going to house my lions in lairs of stones, so they will live under natural conditions."

"I don't see why the neighbourhood should be frightened. Lions take no notice of you unless you provoke them. My wife is not at all perturbed."

Traders Ask Yard For Help

SMALL traders and cafe owners in the Elephant and Castle district intend to petition Scotland Yard for protection against London's "Dead-End kids"—gangs of youths who are wrecking and ruining their businesses.

Mark Selby, Jewish owner of a milk bar in the Walworth-road, a war-wounded veteran with four children, committed suicide after he had been beaten up and his premises wrecked by the gangs because he refused to supply them with free cigarettes and refreshments.

Recently gangsters marched into the milk bar he once owned and threatened the manageress. Two plain-clothes men from Southwark Police Station, who had been posted to the vicinity, appeared and the men quickly vanished.

WINDOW SMASHED

A few minutes later the plate-glass window of a jeweller's shop in Walworth-road was smashed and several rings stolen. Later a free fight started in a cafe in the nearby London-road. A man threw a cup of scalding tea into a customer's face.

The night attendant at the cafe blew the police whistle he bought some days ago, but no one ran to his assistance.

Police officers with a tender were too busy dealing with another disturbance opposite the Trocadero Cinema.

"Every night is a night of terror," the manageress of the late Mr. Selby's milk bar said.

"Our takings were about £25 a day. Now they have dropped to £5. Between 2 o'clock and midnight, usually our most profitable time, we have drawn less than £1."

"It means ruin for this bar. We will have to close down, and several people will be out of work."

Judge on Crime Under Cloak of Friendship

THE following sentences were passed by the Recorder, Sir Gerald Dodson, at the Old Bailey recently on the four men accused in the Mayfair jewel thefts case:

Victor Frederick Cochrane Hervey, 23 (son of Lord Herbert Hervey and nephew of the Marquis of Bristol), was sent to penal servitude for three years.

William Goodwin (30) received two years' imprisonment; George Ernest Arthur Hering (23), 18 months, and Geoffrey Comp (24), nine months.

The Recorder told Hervey that he realised he was the main-spring of the conspiracies and that the crimes were of the meanest description. "How low you have stooped you alone know," declared the judge.

To Hering the Recorder said: "Your part in this is of the meanest kind. You betrayed a friend, Mrs. Daubeny."

Hervey and Goodwin had been found guilty of conspiring with others to steal property belonging to Mrs. Daubeny, of Queen Street, Mayfair, and Mrs. Gabrielle Burley, of Seymour Place, Park Lane.

Hering (who has been referred to by the prosecution as Peter Proud) and Comp had pleaded guilty to conspiring to steal jewellery belonging to Mrs. Daubeny. Hering had also pleaded guilty to conspiring to steal Mrs. Burley's property.

Three-Day Trial
During the three-day trial, Hering gave evidence for the prosecution.

Detective Inspector Berry said that Comp was a former public schoolboy and had gone to a military college. He obtained a commission in an infantry regiment in January, 1935, but because he was unable to keep out of debt and because he was connected with numerous worthless cheques and appeared to have had no interest in his work, he was called out to resign in December that year. About that time an allowance which he had from his family ceased. He was later a salesman selling silk stockings, and in February, 1937, he enlisted in the Royal Army Ordnance Corps as a private.

He came to London in April, 1938, and as a result of being convicted of

Former Public School Boy
Inspector Berry said that Hering had appeared at Westminster in 1933 when he was discharged under the Probation of Offenders Act on payment of costs for attempted false pretences. He was a married man separated from his wife, and had one child aged three.

He, too, was a former public school boy.
"Lately, Hering had been more or less living by his wits."

Goodwin was sentenced to three months' hard labour in 1930 for being a suspected person and was fined £2 in the same year for creating his bail. In 1932 he was sentenced to 18 months' hard labour. He took an Indian student out, got him very drunk, and stole £25 from him. In 1935 he was sentenced to 12 months' hard labour for house-breaking and larceny and in 1937 to two months' hard labour for being a suspected person loitering for the purpose of house-breaking.

"He will not tell me anything of what he has been doing since he was released from prison in May, 1937," added the Inspector. "He is an expert house-breaker."

"Domination"
Hervey had no previous convictions. He was educated at a public school and went into a military college in February, 1934. In November, 1934, on the advice of the commandant, his father applied for him to be withdrawn.

"Hervey tells me," said Inspector Berry, "that since then he has been engaged in armament deals. There is no doubt that for some time past he has been indulging his criminal tendencies. He is an associate of persons in the West End who live by their wits."

"There is no doubt that he is the ringleader in this case." Asked by the Recorder if the police had received any information from the accused men that might lead to the recovery of the jewellery, Inspector Berry said that none had been recovered—and no information had been volunteered by any of them. Hering had stated that he was acting under the threats of Hervey, and he (the Inspector) believed that was the case. He also thought that Hervey was a person of domination and power over the other three men.

"Redeem the Past"
The Recorder, passing sentence, said that the only difficult feature was to know how to apportion blame fairly and to allot the punishment. The unfortunate feature of the case, which perhaps did not apply to Goodwin so much as to the other three, was that craft and guile had been used by men of education. They had used the cloak of friendship to conceal the commission of crime.

"I only hope," he added, "that all of you, certainly those who have the advantage of birth and education, will have sufficient manhood in you when this punishment is over that you will redeem the past. There is no reason why you should throw up the sponge."

Mrs. Daubeny and Mrs. Burley were women who could truly say, "Save me from my friends"—though Comp was concerned only in the stealing from Mrs. Daubeny.

The Recorder told Goodwin: "The way of the amateur criminal is hard, but the way of the professional is disastrous. And the wages of it are ruinous. You compete with the law. Once again you have been found out." To Hervey he said: "It is said that for every man there is a high way and a low. You have chosen the low way of living and it has led you into your present position—into the shadow and doom of this disaster. You have misused your talents, thrown away your opportunities and been unfaithful to every trust you might have held."

"I realise that you were the mainspring of this conspiracy or conspiracies—and they are crimes of the meanest description."

EMPIRE NEWS

DARWIN.
The North Australian Air Force station will be opened about a year before it was expected, with the arrival here shortly of a skeleton unit, consisting of one squadron of Avro-Anson bombers.

The Federal Government has given no explanation of the move, but it is understood to be due to the growing world tension.

The squadron will use the Ross Smith airport, this being the first occasion on which an Air Force station has been opened on a civil aerodrome.

Portable steel huts and hangars have been erected for the accommodation of men and machines.

The bombers will be engaged in reconnaissance duty, probably combining coastguard service and the patrolling of the Timor and Arutara coastline.

GERMAN PURCHASES OF MANGANESE

CAPE TOWN.
South African exports of raw materials to Germany and Italy, particularly Germany, have grown considerably in recent years. At present Germany is by far the biggest importer of the Union's manufactures.

Last year Germany headed the list as the Union's chief foreign purchaser, having taken £4,092,359 worth of exports, compared with £4,082,050 in 1937. Among the exported raw materials were 234,000 tons of manganese ore, valued at £355,237, copper bar to the value of £44,492, and 9,306 cwt of scrap metal valued at £2,870. Germany also purchased a considerable quantity of copper ore from South West Africa valued at £47,154, and £97,597 worth of vanadium ore.

Aided Man Of 80 —Was Killed

AN allegation that a man was killed when he went to the aid of another man, aged 80, was made at Skipton, Yorkshire, recently.

Richard William Matthews, 57-year-old quarryman, of Barnoldswick, was charged with the murder of William Taylor, deputy at Craven Lodging House, Barnoldswick.

The prosecuting solicitor said Matthews would not have the protection of the defence of drink, because he was not drunk.

He had been visiting certain clubs, and returned to the lodging house perfectly sober, it was suggested.

CHALLENGE TO FIGHT

He made his way to a room where cooking took place. He was in a treacherous mood and threw out a general challenge to fight.

William Henry Ward, aged 80, said he would like to fight.

Matthews advanced in such a threatening way that Taylor said, "Do not strike the old man."

Then Matthews, added the solicitor, made a rush at Taylor, knocked him and the old man to the floor, and kicked Taylor in the stomach.

While Taylor was groaning there, Matthews, it was alleged, said, "I will learn thee from interfering," and kicked him savagely in the face.

Matthews pleaded not guilty, and was committed for trial.

"Adam" As A Shilling Show at Blackpool

Fleet Street.
Mr. Jacob Epstein, interviewed recently on the proposed exhibition of his new statue "Adam" at Blackpool at a shilling a time, said:

"My first reaction was rage. I wanted to stop it. But on second thoughts I have changed my mind. After all, art is for everybody or it is nothing. My statues are not made just for the intellectuals of London. Let us see what the average man and woman think of my 'Adam.' Let us hear what the people of Lancashire have to say about it."

"WHAT BLACKPOOL SAYS"

"If the statue is properly shown to them as a work of art, not as a sensational exhibition—a peep-show, they will not reject it. On the whole, I feel now that it is rather a compliment. I shall be most interested to hear what Blackpool holiday crowds have to say. Perhaps they will not reject it. The Tate Gallery would have rejected it, as the Tate Gallery did reject my 'Genesis' when it was offered to them."

"As for the owner, honestly I don't know who he is or what is his name. But assuredly I have not got £7,000 for the statue or anything like it. Financially the sale has profited me very little. It is said that the owner is an Australian goldminer. Well, perhaps he is. I don't know. It is nothing to do with me. Perhaps the statue should have been bought for

Emir's Son Gets Thrill For Twopence

AN African prince, Usman Liman, 39-year-old son of the Emir of Katsina, who arrived in England on Tuesday by air from Kano, Nigeria, on his first visit, had the biggest thrill of his life recently for two-pence.

Accompanied by a reporter and Mr. P. F. Masterman-Smith, an English official from Nigeria, he made his first trip on the London Underground Railway.

Usman had heard many wonderful tales about London, but he was sceptical about the railway that "travelled under the houses and streets."

When I met the Emir (states the reporter) and his two sons at their London hotel, writes a News Chronicle reporter, they greeted me by taking my hand in both of theirs.

Change In Army Council

A change in the constitution of the Army Council was notified in a recent London Gazette. The effect of it is that Engineer Vice-Admiral Sir Harold Brown, Director-General of Munitions Production, is no longer a member.

The post of Director-General of Munitions Production was created in 1936. In 1937, when the Army Council was reorganised, Sir Harold Brown was appointed to take over the duties of Master-General of the Ordnance from Lt.-Gen. Sir Hugh Elles, who relinquished that post "to facilitate a reorganisation under which the two departments were merged."

It seems that in future the Army Council will not have either a Director-General of Munitions Production or a Master-General of the Ordnance. This suggests that the setting up of the Ministry of Supply, at present only in an embryo state, has been anticipated.

The duties connected with the Ordnance will continue to be done by the Director-General of Munitions. Although Sir Harold Brown has not yet left the War Office, sections of his department are daily being removed to the Adelphi, where the Minister of Supply is to have his new quarters.

To See Royal Show

The Emir, who is a keen agriculturist, and a good judge of horses, is looking forward to seeing the Royal Show at Windsor.

His younger son, Nagego, who speaks English fluently has been in England before. He is going to Richmond this afternoon, to see the polo and is looking forward to a game in England himself.

The Emir was quite willing that Usman should make a trip on the Underground. Usman, for the trip, changed his fez for a large loosely tied white turban, and wore shoes.

As we go nearer the station his enthusiasm for the outing somewhat waned. He did not like going down the steps at the station entrance "under the street."

He wanted to see the train.

"A Little Frightened"
"I am a little frightened," he confessed. "Where do we find the train, and where does it come out?"

Mr. Masterman-Smith explained that we went down the lift, which was like a deep well in his own country, and that the train travelled along a tunnel to another station, where we came above ground through another similar well.

Usman was amazed at the speed of the lift, and drew back in alarm when the train roared out of the tunnel. He sucked his breath through his teeth at the wonder of the doors that opened themselves, and watched the walls of the tunnel open-eyed as the train sped along.

He would give no opinion about the trip while the journey lasted, but as soon as we were safe on the platform he said:

"I was very much afraid all the time. I do not want to go again." He tucked up his burnous and hurried up the stairs to the lift and found himself at the foot of the escalator.

A burnous is not the most practical garment for negotiating an escalator in the rush-hour, but we all got to the top without accident.

ADVICE TO NURSING MOTHERS

It is very important, doctors say, not to overtax your system immediately after the birth of a child. When you are feeding baby yourself, you should take plenty of easily digested nourishment.

For that reason, doctors throughout China recommend Horlicks. They have proved that Horlicks stimulates the appetite, promotes sound sleep and strengthens the whole system. Also Horlicks increases the supply of maternal milk and ensures the success of breast feeding.

DEBATE ON PALESTINE

Slamming The Door.

"The stream of the British Empire opened the door to the Jews when all other doors were shut. Shall we slam the door in the face of the long wandering Jew?"

Mr. Malcolm MacDonald, in a speech reaffirming the White Paper policy, said that perhaps nothing could do more to destroy the prospect of peace in Palestine than starting upon a policy, and then completely reversing it, or showing hesitancy, and therefore commencing another long period without a policy at all.

Mr. Duff Cooper's policy would not produce peace, but would make the whole of the rest of the Arab world implacable enemies to a Jewish national home.

No Prospect Of Peace

There was no policy which would produce immediate peace in Palestine, but he believed that the Government policy contained the basis on which ultimately the Arabs and Jews can settle side by side in peace together.

Mr. MacDonald deprecated the Opposition's remarks, saying the promise made to the Jews, and the few Opposition references about promises made to the Arabs.

He declared: "We regard the White Paper policy as carrying out faithfully and reconciling faithfully the promises we made to the Jews and Arabs."

Dealing with the attitude of the Mandates Commission, Mr. MacDonald said they had sent their observations to the accredited representatives of the governments concerned, and had asked for comments. The report came by completed until those comments are put in.

Policy v. Mandate

Mr. MacDonald said he realised that some members were apprehensive of the possibility of the League Council saying that our policy was not in the terms of the mandate. He gave an assurance that if the Council reached a decision, which in their view involved the necessity of altering the mandate, they would not take steps to bring about an alteration until Parliament had had an opportunity to consider the situation.

Referring to the immigration policy, Mr. MacDonald denied that the Government was indifferent to the fate of the refugees in Central Europe. He said that Palestine cannot provide the whole solution to the refugee problem, but it can make a considerable contribution towards the solution of the problem, and it would be untruthful to say that the White Paper policy is barring the door to the settlement of Central European refugees in Palestine.

(Cheers)—Reuter.

M. P. Hits Playing Up Of Dictators

LONDON, July 16.—The publicity given to dictators in the press was scathed by Mr. Alfred Edwards, Labour M.P. for East Middlesbrough, in a speech at Middlesbrough to-day.

"If our press refused to mention dictators for six months and referred instead to matters of human interest about the people of our country, I venture to suggest that there would not be a dictator in Germany at the end of this time," he stated. "Germany is the weakest nation in Europe to-day, despite the widely-held belief to the contrary, and that is her sole complaint. Women in Court Charged With Fighting

With part of their dresses in tatters and one of them displaying teeth marks on her right hand, two married women, Tam Kwan-ying, 43, and Yeung Sau-king, 21, were charged before Mr. R. Edwards at the Central Magistracy yesterday with disorderly conduct.

According to the charge, the women are alleged to have been in a public place, and a similar charge was preferred against another woman, Tam Yik, who was on bail of $25, but failed to appear in Court.

An order for her arrest was issued by the Magistrate.

"Fights appear to start in this district on the slightest excuse," said Sgt. Pockson, who prosecuted. "This is the fourth or fifth reported to us in that vicinity during the past month."

There are Punli, Shanghai and Chiu Chow people in the district, and he said he knew where you are, a squabble develops into a clan fight."

Describing the incident which brought the two women into Court, Sgt. Pockson said that the two women in court visited Tam Yik at the latter's home in Ming Yuen Street.

The purpose of the visit was to retrieve some belongings left there by a relative.

The three women quarrelled and a fight ensued.

The charges against Tam and Yeung were remanded until the third woman could be brought into court.

He also announced that work on the plan was beginning on Thursday.

The Minister of Agriculture revealed details of the partitioning plan, according to which 1,250,000 acres of estate land will be divided during the next ten years into 20,000 farms. The State will assist in the project by appropriating 1,000,000,000 lire, of which 400,000,000 will be used for the construction of highways, water works and public buildings, while 600,000,000 lire will be provided for the construction of peasant homes. Luxury Opium Den In France Widows Of Officers Under Arrest

PARIS, July 20.

THE discovery of an opium den run by the widows of two French officers is the latest Society sensation in Toulon.

Two detectives, posing as friends of a captain known to the owners of the opium den, succeeded in gaining admission to the villa.

After purchasing three kilograms of opium and being escorted to a secret room which was used as a smoking den, the detectives revealed their identity and took the two women owners into custody.

HITLER READY FOR PEACE MOVE?

Albert Forster, leader of the Free City's Nazis, Germans back from Berlin, has said that a solution of the Danzig problem would be attained in three stages.

First, about the time of the September Nuremberg Nazi Congress this year, the Danzig Senate would proclaim that all citizens of the Free City were German although it would not announce any change in the City's legal status.

Secondly, the Senate would announce that the railways and harbour of Danzig would be transferred to German control.

Finally, it would announce a similar transfer of the Customs administration.

The statement that the Vauxhall Ten gives most for your money is based on simple facts. Independent springing; hydraulic brakes; controlled synchronism; over 40 m.p.g. (petrol); 3,500 m.p.g. (oil). Is there another Ten which can boast these features? Yet they are but a few of the many to be found in this Vauxhall.

Year Of Din

NOW and then a small voice is raised against the noise nuisance. One wonders why it is drowned by the blare which is modernity, or do the great mass of the public like to move in an atmosphere of false excitement and noise as an antidote to the disturbing events of the outside world?

Noise can be stimulating, even intoxicating, but it is also tiring, and in one quarter there has been a call for Government action, as the number of inconsiderate noise-makers increases every day, and the effect upon the mental health of the community is held to be serious.

As a contributor to the cacophony of 1939, the "mike" has much to answer for, from the adenoidal accents of the crooner to the violent rhetoric of those Continental—politicians—whose utterances have become as the thundering of the gods, reaching to every corner of the earth.

There is no escape—except to turn it off at the source. There is a law of sorts in Hongkong to prevent the disturbing of the peace after 10 p.m. but that does not stop the owners of the super-super-something-or-the-other.

Those who are compelled to listen willy-nilly, and who esteem escape from those stirring messages which shake the world would proclaim a tightening up of whatever restrictions there are against blaring loud-speakers.

The Army Of To-day

The fathers of the youths now being called up for compulsory service at home are the men who helped to initiate the change in the military attitude towards the rank and file. When they stepped forward in 1914, it was to join an Army bound by that iron discipline which the civilian found irksome and difficult to understand. The "First Hundred Thousand" did much to break down the old barriers in an institution that was ripe for change. They proved beyond doubt that the fighting spirit of an Army is not necessarily governed by discipline that could detect insubordination in the twitching of an eye.

There was much to admire in the pre-war Army, in its efficiency and unquestioning obedience, but that superb fighting machine was fashioned in a mould that was often rough-edged. A new spirit is abroad to-day. Gone is the sergeant-major of the "You broke your mother's heart but you won't break mine" type; the instructor to-day is a teacher in the modern manner.

Perhaps no greater example of the change of heart in officialdom

THOSE WHO ALWAYS PAY

—Strube in the "Daily Express"

If you say
black is white
often enough

—people will believe it: that is the theory of GOEBBELS and he is practising it in Danzig.

DENNIS CLARKE

THE ordinary German believes that you and I are "war-mongers" whose sole desire is to encircle and attack Germany.

GOEBBELS has two cardinal principles. First, hammer home your own point of view till people believe it or go dotty. He knows that if you tell most people one thing all the time, and they hear no contradiction, they will come to believe it eventually. Secondly, counter opposing propaganda by picking on its weakest points, suppressing some essential part of it. Roosevelt's peace appeal was handled in this way by the Goebbels-Press.

Another function of Dr. Goebbels's propaganda is to work up good will abroad for Germany. In this he has not been successful, so we shall pass it over.

The rules for successful propaganda are laid down by Hitler in his "Mein Kampf." Let us examine them.

HITLER says that propaganda has no morality. "It is a means to an end. It must be directed to the masses. A million workmen are more desirable booty for the propagandist than a handful of aesthetes."

Propaganda must be aimed at people's feelings, not at their heads. The masses are feminine, like women, to be wooed through their emotions," writes Hitler.

"The masses understand only a mass. The rougher and more brutal your phrasing the more people you will convince."

Hitler wrote this from bitter experience of trying to convert people by sweet reason.

In fact, Hitler has the demagogue's contempt for the mass of people. Their receptivity is limited, he writes, their understanding small, their forgetfulness immense. The last point is interesting. Dr. Goebbels is now busy blackening the character of the Mr. Chamberlain whom he described last September as a man of peace.

HITLER maintains that speech is the Queen of all propaganda instruments. People will not spend a penny to buy a newspaper they disagree with. They may throw away a free pamphlet, however forcibly written. But the spoken word, public or private, is all powerful.

He puts his finger on one striking advantage of speech. A writer does could be quoted thus on the issue of a booklet, "A Welcome to the Militiaman," a bit of good sense and brotherliness in which the reasons for military practices are explained to the "rookie" of 1939. The old barrack square has lost its terrors, and the pathway to efficiency is easier to tread.

not see his audience. A speaker can see from the faces of his audience what effect he is having and attune himself accordingly.

He admits he learned his tactics from the Communists. He learned, he confesses, that in a big meeting the individual's personality is sunk in the audience's. "Though a worm, he becomes part of a big dragon," he comments.

One of the first things to do is to shake a man in his own beliefs; then you may convert him. Stun his critical faculties with pagant and noise.

Be simple. Hitler says men understand right and wrong, black and white, truth and lie. No half measures. The speaker is an angel. His opponents devils.

Don't be objective. Put all the guilt on your opponent, even if he does not deserve it. "Never admit the glimmer of justice on the other side," he says. The masses, writes the Fuehrer, cannot distinguish where the foreign injustice ends and their own injustice begins.

FINALLY the propagandist must concentrate hate on one enemy at a time. Go for Czecho-Slovakia, for instance, while buttering up Poland and Jugo-Slavia. Their turn will come.

Just now Goebbels is concentrating hate on England, even forgetting Russia.

What a brilliant executor of his chief's ideas Dr. Goebbels has proved. Hitler himself confesses he is astonished at the results obtained by following the above rules.

I often wonder if Dr. Goebbels would get a job on the British Council, our propaganda organisation.

This fact astonishes the average Briton. It baffles him that our policy can be so absurdly misunderstood.

He feels that if he chatted to an ordinary German he would easily convince him that Britain is not "warmongering." He would not. I have talked to many average Germans and never got beyond being told I was a fool or a liar.

I once nearly went crazy arguing with an intelligent German friend about the Italian and German bombing of open cities in Spain. He told me that it was the Republicans who blew up their own towns.

The reason for this state of affairs is one man: Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels.

HE is the magician of propaganda who takes facts like a pack of cards, shuffles them up and deals them out in the wrong order.

He persuaded the Germans that Czecho-Slovakia menaced their existence; that the Lithuanians treated the Memelanders brutally; that the Austrians were governed by a gang of Bolsheviks and Monarchists.

He is now on the job again. He is persuading his countrymen that the British are a horde of Visigoths bent on the destruction of peaceful Germany; that Mr. Chamberlain is an even more fanatical warmonger than Winston Churchill or David Lloyd George. He is deceiving Hitler at Munich. I have no doubt he will get away with it again.

For this work Dr. Goebbels earns, nominally, £4,800 a year. He is worth much more, of course, and gets it in the way of liberal expenses, free servants, cars, houses. The splendour of his newest mansion on a lake near Berlin has earned comment. His offices, in a fine old palace on the Wilhelm Platz, are among Berlin's finest.

The doctor's slight body (five feet four inches) supports a large head with a pair of intelligent, almost catlike eyes. His manners are suave. He can be charming when he wants.

BUT he is not liked. No squares are named after him. For days before Goebbels' arrival in conquered Vienna last year I had to wade through slabby newspaper articles explaining what a nice fellow was "Unser Herr Doktor" ("Our Mr. Doctor"). His reception was cold compared with Goerring's and Hitler's.

But the doctor has more valuable qualities than popularity. Hitler first discovered the brilliant organising ability of the little Doctor of Philosophy from Heidelberg University. He once described Goebbels as "Gescheit," which means "clever," not always in the best sense.

So Goebbels withdrew to his propaganda. His triumph is to have transformed millions of comfortable, docile Germans into countless Siegfrieds eager to die for Hitler tomorrow—and kept them geared up to that point. Results marie him as one of the most successful men alive.

How has he done it?

ODDLY enough, he copied our methods. Our wartime stories of dead German soldiers being boiled down to provide gun lubricants are the admitted original models of all Dr. Goebbels' paraphernalia.

Hitler himself writes in "Mein Kampf": "It was during the war that we had the best chance of estimating the tremendous results to be obtained from a propaganda system properly carried out. The lack on our side was exploited by the enemy so efficiently that one could say it proved a work of real genius."

"In that propaganda I found admirable sources of instruction."

Hitler instances the effect on his own Bavarian regiment of British leaflets which urged the Bavarians to betray the Prussians, who had got them in the mess they were.

Hitler's first party job was propaganda chief. Goebbels merely took over his chief's ideas and put his brains into organising a propaganda machine to get them over.

Goebbels seized control of the media of news and opinion: newspapers, radio, books, theatres. He forbade anybody but the party to hold public meetings. Those who disobeyed went to concentration camps.

Angriff (Attack) became his personal newspaper. Voelkischer Beobachter (People's Observer) became party newspaper. All other papers had to submit their copy for party approval. Propaganda officials watched plays for heresies. Not even comedians escaped censorship.

Meanwhile Nazi teachers took over education. Little Fritz is taught from birth to be a Nazi and nothing else.

How Kay Stammers Entered Women's Final

A Brilliant Display Against Mrs. Fabyan: Miss Marble's Triumph

London, July 7.

After a match which began at 2 o'clock and finished nearly four and a half hours later, England gained a place in the Wimbledon finals yesterday. Miss Kathleen Stammers defeated Mrs. Palfrey Fabyan, of America, by 7-5, 2-6, 6-3 in a contest which was interrupted four times by rain.

The actual playing time was an hour and a quarter. The fourth interruption lasted 2 hours and 10 minutes, and few thought play would be resumed at all. Even the officials had almost despaired of further play, and they would probably have sent round the "No more play to-day" notices at 6 o'clock. But a few minutes before that hour the drizzle stopped.

At once the tarpaulin covers were removed from the court and not only was this match finished, but Miss Alice Marble, of America, joined Miss Stammers in the final by one of the quickest victories ever recorded at Wimbledon. She beat Mrs. Sperling, of Denmark, 6-0, 6-0 in 10 minutes.

How far the interruptions affected the tense first battle it is difficult to say. The points at which they arrived suggest that they had no adverse results for Mrs. Fabyan. She was 1-4 down in the first set when the first stoppage came. She won the next game after resuming, and pulled up from 2-5 to 4-5 before yielding the set.

The next delay came at 1-love to Mrs. Fabyan and deuce. She won the next two points to be 2-0 before the players had again to run to shelter.

Mrs. Fabyan proceeded to 4-love and to 5-2 before the long wait, braved by many more than half the 13,000 crowd present, was enforced on pent-up players who, long before it was up, must have debated whether they would ask to be allowed to begin all over again or resume on the morrow at the critical stage at which they had left off.

WINNER BETTER THAN EVER

One clear impression remained from the painfully drawn out encounter. Such fiery tennis deserved to be sunlit, and that the thread had thus to be broken will be regretted by all who saw this lively display of women's lawn tennis.

Miss Stammers was at the top of her form. I would say that at times she touched greater heights than ever before.

Her forhand drive, the most powerful weapon in her armoury, worked almost to perfection. With it she raked the corners of the American's court, clipped the sidelines with deeply angled cross-court shots, and occasionally found the narrow opening for the pass when Mrs. Fabyan was in her favourite volleying position.

To do that was an achievement. Mrs. Fabyan showed that she is not only the nearest and nimblest forecourt player of all women, but her anticipation of Miss Stammers' counter thrusts was at times uncanny. It was, therefore, to a large extent, the English forhand against the piercing American volleys, though Miss Stammers may also claim a service superiority.

DEFENCE V. POWER

Mrs. Fabyan could not, of course, keep up a non-stop volleying attack. For many rallies she was compelled to stay back, pitting her skilful defence and fleetness of foot against the pace and power of that raking forhand drive. Her strategic use of the lob, not only in moments of stress, but also as a means to turn the point of attack, was excellent.

Some of the rallies were entrancing, and each interruption seemed like taking a succulent sweet-out of a small boy's mouth just when he was enjoying the full measure of it.

Though Miss Stammers secured a 4-love lead in the first set, the games were by no means easily come by. Mrs. Fabyan was within a point of the second, had 5 game points in the third, and another for the fourth. What could be closer than that?

She checked the unhappy sequence by holding her third service game in the rain, and after a quarter of an hour's delay captured Miss Stammers for 2-4. The English girl's reply to this was to increase the pace of her drives. A manlike overhead kill helped in the capture of Mrs. Fabyan's service game for 5-2 and then the battle was at its hottest.

STROKE OF LUCK

Mrs. Fabyan punished some weak second services, and surged up to the net on her own service. So excellent was her anticipation that her racket seemed as a magnet to the ball, and although she moved swiftly about the court she never appeared to have to hurry.

She drew level at 5-all, and if a net-cord stroke, one of many that her top-spin forhand luckily gathered, had not come to Miss Stammers' aid in the next game, she might not have won the set. But Miss Stammers' reprisal was a worthy one. The forhand was again the predominant stroke in some fine driving bouts, and England was saving a set up.

It was now Mrs. Fabyan's turn, between showers, to reach 4-love. Though she began the set with two double faults, the rallies were even better, the rallies even keener, and the games still weaving around deuce. Miss Stammers won two long deuce and "vantage" games, and then Mrs. Fabyan went out.

But the rain was now falling heavily, and with the match all square, the dismal tarpaulins were again drawn over the court, this time for more than two hours.

BRILLIANT LAST SET

It might have been thought that the long wait would attack the players' nerves, but the third set was probably the best of all. Certainly it was Miss Stammers' best. She won the first two games, held a very close one on her service to keep the advantage at 3-1, and then succumbing to some brilliant American volleying and equally brilliant passing strokes when Miss Stammers herself tried to force home a net attack.

So it was 3-all, but it was Mrs. Fabyan's last thrust. Miss Stammers went out triumphantly from that point, leaving only four more points, and a still larger crowd cheered lustily enough for the full house that had watched the earlier chapters and then went home in despair.

LIGHTNING VICTORY

Miss Marble's lightning victory was astonishing. Mrs. Sperling could win only 9 points in the first set and 5 in the second.

The Danish woman's first service was contemptuously craved to glory. It was the threatening gesture. The American, with sweeping drives of tremendous pace and power to the far corners of the court, scarcely met a counter after that from a player reputed to be one of the stoutest and fleetest retrievers in the game.

Mrs. Sperling was rendered completely helpless against the storm of drives and volleys that were rained on her. She was never allowed to get into her stride. It should be a great final between Miss Marble and Miss Stammers to-morrow.

The meeting was virtually saved from a continuation into the third week by squeezing in the men's doubles semi-final before dark. Cooke and Riggs in partnership reached another final at the expense of the great French veterans, Borotra and Brugnon, whom they beat 6-4, 3-6, 6-3.

One imagines that the slight dampness of the surface and one heavy fall affected Borotra, who still feels the knee injury he received in a ski-ing accident last winter. However that may be, he was at a disadvantage against the quick-fire American volleys.

There must be an Anglo-American final in this event. C. E. Hare and F. H. D. Wilde, the British Davis Cup pair, won a fourth round match against the Yugoslavians, Pance and Mille, 6-1, 6-1, 7-5, and they meet another home pair, J. S. Olliff and R. A. Shaves in the semi-final to-day.

Grace Allen, featured with Warren William, Ellen Drew, Kent Taylor and Judith Barrett in S.S. Van Dine's "The Grace Allen Murder Case," Paramount's comedy-mystery, now showing at the Queen's and Alhambra Theatres, turns detective and even amazes herself with her insane deductions.

Latest Beach Wear

For Seascapades

RAIN or shine, our beaches won't want for colour this summer. Every bathing girl can have all the colours of the spectrum in her swim suit, and what could be more exhilarating than gorgeous tropical colouring as a change from the trim, prim office clothes in dark colours that Miss X and Miss Y wear most of the year round for daily-breading.

We advise them to indulge in all the colour they can on holiday, for colour should be as much a part of the summer change as sea breezes and sunshine—it accentuates the contrast from the daily round.

So this year, instead of conventional navy and white, black and red, and so on, choose a suit that will give some South Sea island glamour, full of coral reds, azure blues, palm greens and sun-glow yellows.

These all-wool "bathers" have been printed by quite a new process, so that a very wide range of colours can be used, and they are absolutely fast to sea and sun.

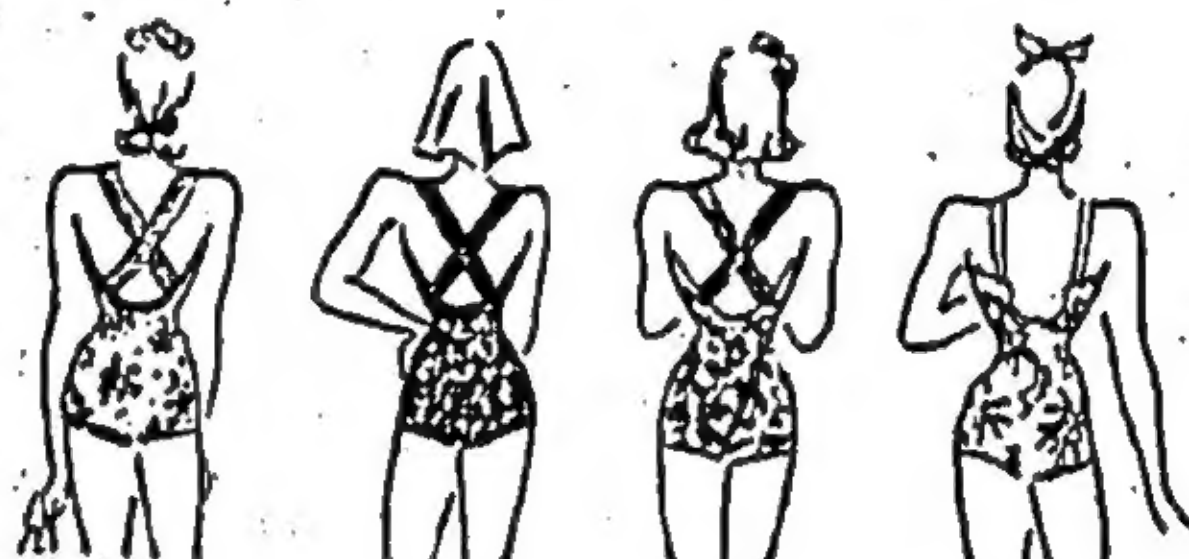

First comes a suit with green ground floral patterned in coral pink, blue, yellow and white. It's made with a lastex bust line and front skirt. The lastex bust line is flattering to the figure, as well as giving fit and comfort.

Next suit is printed with all the under-the-sea glories of a tropical island? There are seaweeds of many colours, and fish of a dozen shades and shapes. This also has the lastex bust line and back and a front skirt.

The cross-over brassiere top is specially attractive on the third bather. It is in white, with an all-over design of colourful galleons, and elastic at bust line, back and legs makes for perfect fit.

Last, and gayest of all, is a suit with coral ground patterned in palm trees, South Sea maidens, flowers and birds, in dazzling array. The white wool-ribbon shoulder straps are adjustable, the wool-ribbon being slotted through to tie in a bow in front. It also has elastic at the bust line and a front skirt.

The little line sketches show you just what the back of each of these pure wool suits looks like. They're grand both for sun and sea bathing.

These Tennis Parties

THERE is a singular belief inherent in most hostesses that they have only to get their husbands to trace wavering white lines upon the lawn, erect a net, buy a dozen tennis balls, and command the first dozen people who come to her mind to "come over for tea and tennis," in order to ensure the most successful kind of social and sporting afternoon.

Personally, I dislike tennis parties, although, like the majority of us, from that very first afternoon when I respond to the wheedling, "Do come, we're having a few people along for tennis on Saturday," I continue to rally to the call without a smile on my face. And yet, how absurdly funny it all is.

You accept, you don your clean flannels, take train or car, and arrive to find the traditional scene. There is the court all rolled and marked; there is the net slightly sagging and calling for that solemn business with two racquets; there is the non-playing hostess under a tree with her supposedly non-playing husband, who intends to be in on every possible set.

There, too, are your fellow-partners in the rout—the tigers (energy-looking fellows with important blazers), the tigresses (brown, sleeky ladies with rolled socks, unpowdered noses, and a couple of racquets apiece), the nondescripts like oneself (a job lot of men and girls in white), and the rabbits, terror-stricken youths and maidens with octagonal racquets and an appalling consciousness of the hungry tigers and their mates nearby.

Spin Racquets
For a while the talk is general, and then the host says, "Well, what about starting?" Everyone starts edging away from the court deprecatingly, at the same time intent upon being in the first set. Then, after everyone has said "No fear, not the first set for me," racquets are spun and four players find themselves facing one another with twitching smiles. Then the chorus begins by the first to say, "Well, how'll we play? I'll tell you frankly, this is my first game this year."

Racquets are spun again for partners, and again to decide about sides, and the attacking pair thrust balls at each other imploringly, with "You serve first" and, "No, really, you do, please," and the tennis party opens according to ritual with a majestic double fault.

The set wears away, and the players chaff one another, and the host fetches balls from flower-bed and road, and the other guests listen politely to their hostess and gnaw their nails, the cage set of deuce games potters to 15-14, 15 all, 10-15, and on, on, on.

But at last it is over, and again nobody wishes to play, and all cry earnestly, "I'll sit this one out," and racquets are tucked away, and another set begins, and the host, still out of it, goes on fetching stray balls, and the whole thing is over in about five minutes, a deceitful tiger and tigress having been opposed to two perfectly honest rabbits who were just as bad as they said they were, and who wander dazedly off the court.

Then the hostess says, "Now, who hasn't played? You haven't, Miss Sims, and you haven't, Mr. Crane, but everyone else has." At once bashfulness sets in again, and re-lance to be favoured. But the tigers of the last set are selected, since the set was so short, and the same thing happens again, and everyone is under the trees in five minutes, feeling that the first lot, whose turn it is to play, have been having very much the best of it, having run their opening set to 34 games.

They do play again and keep it up till tea time, having now learned the crafty tricks which keep a set going. Then, when tea is over (a draughtily business under the trees), the inevitable happens and the host, itching to be at it, cries, "Now, what about a men's four, eh?" The ladies settle into their chairs. The high spot of the day has arrived.

The gods are at their frolics. A men's four!

Fisher of Balls
And the men, however bad they may be, are conscious of what is expected of them, and with stiff gusto they proceed to slash, lunge, jump, crouch, elude, slam, drive, and dash the perspiration from their eyebrows all to no great purpose beyond that of causing the odd rabbit out to take up a position in the road with a landing net for fishing balls out of the stream.

Then it is over, and everyone starts having return matches, and it is recalled that the women haven't had a four, and they have one, and more return matches are played, and a freshly assorted men's four gets going.

Twilight falling finds the finale to all tennis parties in progress—a dashing single between the two worst rabbits, who, taking the opportunity afforded by everyone put-

Sewing Aids

A FEW items, not generally found in work baskets, may be usefully included. For sharpening scissors, a square of emery paper is ideal. A nail file is useful for tucking under small seams on thin materials. The ordinary darning mushroom is too big for children's socks and other small items. A large empty cotton reel serves the purpose well.

At the bottom of the basket keep a small tin of talcum powder. A little sprinkled on the fingers now and then, particularly when sewing out-of-doors in hot weather, prevents them from becoming sticky.

In a prominent position near the top of the basket keep a magnet. There is no quicker way of recovering lost needles and pins than by pushing it round the basket—or over the floor.

CUT some lean, cooked ham into small pieces and put them into a buttered fire-proof dish. Sprinkle with dots of butter and put in the oven to heat through.

And the hostess says, "Well, it has been nice, and all. You must come again." And, oddly enough, we do!

Iced Coffee

A DELICIOUS hot-weather drink is iced coffee. This can be made with the least trouble simply by taking a small tin of café au lait and diluting it with cold water according to the directions. Pour the diluted café into a cocktail shaker or large stopper bottle, and shake with one or two spoonfuls of vanilla ice-cream until frothy.

Pour into tall glasses, add a dab of whipped cream if liked, and serve. If it is not required at once, keep the mixture in a refrigerator or ice-box. Add the cream just before serving.

Hot-Weather Hints

ON hot, sticky evenings, don't take a cold bath, it will only make you hotter. Take a tepid one just before you go to bed, and then pat some eau de Cologne over your entire body. Use a fresh-smelling variety of bath salts or bath essence.

During the daytime, lighten your make-up. A good idea is to dilute your usual liquid foundation with a little skin tonic, so that your face is prevented from becoming too greasy. Give the feet a cooling treatment.

Rub iced astringent on the heels and arches, and spare a little time to massage them before you retire at night—it is well worth it.

Don't try putting new make-up over old—it invariably clogs the skin.

Skilful Mending

IT is annoying when a favourite pair of stockings suddenly springs a ladder, or a large hole, or when a well-liked dress or coat gets torn, for the repair is generally obvious unless we are very careful about it.

Here are several ways in which mending may be almost invisible. A mended ladder is less noticeable when a very small tuck is made on the wrong side, then the ladder part cut away as closely as possible to the stitching. On the right side it looks like a draw, which is less obvious than a darn—or vice versa.

Always use a very fine needle and mending-silk that matches perfectly, and trim with a sharp pair of embroidery scissors, being careful not to cut the stitches, or another ladder will start.

Holes in the heels and toes may be patched if you always keep handy a few old stockings of various shades, and use them to cut patches slightly larger than the hole to be mended.

Trim the ragged edges of the hole. Place the patch under the hole, and run-stitch it all round, about one-eighth of an inch from the edge, making the smallest possible stitches on the right side, and, of course, using matching silk. Run-stitch again round the extreme edge of the hole, or slip-stitch the edge to the patch, using very small stitches.

You will find this method much neater and more durable than a darn.

Stockings that have shrunk in the foot in the wash can have a new toe piece added in the same way.

Tears in Clothes

Jagged tears in clothes can be mended practically invisibly in this way.—Turn the garment inside out and lay flat on the ironing table, with the damaged part uppermost. Carefully draw the edges together so that the broken ends of the threads come together, but do not overlap. Pin or tack them through to the ironing blanket to prevent slipping, then secure with strips of adhesive tape, cut half an inch longer than the tear. Press lightly with a warm iron. If carefully done the mend will be invisible on the right side.

A hole can be patched in the same way if you have a piece of the material. Be careful that the grain of the patch follows the same direction as that of the garment. It is best to cut the edges quite straight all round the hole.

Take the patch in position on the wrong side of the garment. Turn over to the right side, tack once again, then, with matching cotton, or better still with strands of the actual material run-stitch along the grain of the material, taking the stitches through the double material, and just over the edge of the hole. Make very small stitches, and work from the right side so that you can keep your lines straight. The patch should die about a quarter of an inch larger all round, this provides for any pull on the patch. Don't pull the stitches too tight.

When finished, turn to wrong side, and press with warm iron over a damp cloth.

Turn Net Curtains

Holes can be patched invisibly in net curtains, if you have a piece of the same net, and matching cotton. Cut the edges of the tear straight. Lay curtain flat on the table, right side down, and place patch in position. This should be about a quarter of an inch larger all round. Match up the holes, then tack in position all round. Over-sew the two thicknesses together, keeping to the lines.

Afterwards carefully cut away the loose edges on both sides of the patch. For better security a second line of overcasting can be worked. Use sharp embroidery scissors for trimming.

Press well on the wrong side and the patch will be invisible. That is much better than darning a large surface, but it is essential to see that the holes correspond, and the lines run straight.

SATISFACTORY YEAR

China Emporium Limited Annual Meeting

Despite the reduction in trade at the close of the year owing to the fall of Canton and Hankow and the depreciation of the Chinese National Currency, a very satisfactory report for the year was presented by Hon. Sir Shou-son Chow, Chairman, at the annual meeting of the China Emporium Limited yesterday. A dividend of 80 cents per share was declared.

Supporting the Chairman were Hon. Mr. T. N. Chau, Hon. Mr. Li Tse-long, Messrs. Fung Fook-ting, Kan Tong-po, Chan Lim-pak, P. K. Kwok, Chan Tse-kei, Chau Man-chi, Fung Ping-fan (Directors), M. Chan Har (General Manager), Chung Kwan-ling (Manager), Chan Hui-leung (sub-manager) and W. K. Chan (sub-manager and secretary).

Presenting the report, Sir Shou-son Chow said:

The profit for the period under review together with the balance brought forward from the last account amounts to $258,321.58 which your Directors recommend should be dealt with as follows:

To pay a dividend of 80 cents per share	$108,863.20
To write off Preliminary & Formation Expenses	40,000.00
To write off Land and Building	30,000.00
To write off Furniture and Fixtures	35,078.53
To write off Bad and Doubtful Debts	2,000.00
To Bonus to Founders, Directors, Managers and Staff	19,014.20
To carry forward to the credit of a new account	25,207.05
	$258,321.58

The Directors are happy to be able to place before you such a satisfactory result of the year's working and they feel no doubt that you will approve the above method of distribution.

You will notice that the writing off of $40,000 under the heading of Preliminary and Formation Expenses will mean the entire elimination of this account. I think this is a sound policy in view of the fact that the company has been established for over seven years.

Marked Improvement

During the period under review there had been a marked improvement in the volume of business resultant from the gradual improvement in general trade in the first few months, but towards the close of the year, owing to the fall of Canton and Hankow which interrupted the free movement of trade with the interior and the heavy depreciation of the Chinese National Currency which reduced the purchasing power of certain sections of the general public, this improvement had not been maintained. However, your Directors are able to report that although the volume of increased business did not come up to their expectation, yet on the whole the turnover exceeded that of the previous year.

The Directors' proposal to pay a dividend of 80 cents per share and the bonus to Founders, Directors, Managers and Staff is in accordance with the Articles of Association of the company and I trust shareholders will agree.

The Directors wish to report that the second drawing for the redemption of $100,000.00 of the Company's Debentures took place on June 1 under the supervision of the trustee for the Debenture holders. All those numbers that had been drawn were paid at the beginning of this month, thus reducing the outstanding amount of Debentures to $800,000.00 at the present time.

I am sure shareholders will be pleased to hear that the financial condition of the Company has now greatly improved under the constant and careful attention of our Supervisors and Managers. I think it is your wish that I should convey to you your hearty thanks for their joint efforts in bringing the Company's finance to its present healthy condition and in making the year's working such a success.

I now beg formally to propose that the report of the Directors and Accounts for the year ended March 31, 1939, as presented, be adopted.

Following the unanimous adoption of the report and accounts, Mr. T. N. Chau, Mr. Chau Man-chi and Mr. Fung Ping-fan were re-elected to the Board of Directors.

Messrs. Percy Smith Seth and Fleming were re-elected auditors for the year.

Compromise Concluded After Many Weeks

BELGRADE, July 15.—Publication of the Serbo-Croat compromise concluded after weeks of negotiations, and formation of a new Government to enforce the accord, would be postponed until Regent Prince Paul's return from London, it was reported to-day.

The compromise was reached after political and juridical parleys carried on in Slovenia for some time. No publicity was given these negotiations because official quarters wished to avoid these public discussions and polemics which marked last April's efforts to reach a compromise. In April, Premier Draguleha, Tsvetkovich and M. Vladimir Matichok, Croat leader, sought to launch preliminary parleys in a fanfare of publicity.

Lesson Taken To Heart

The result of their efforts to stir up public unrest was unfavourable and the lesson was taken to heart. The contents of the new agreement have not yet been revealed. But they are said to differ somewhat from the Tsvetkovich-Matichok accords of April 27.

It is no longer a question of holding a plebiscite to delimit a Croat region, but rather to divide powers between the central Government and a new Croat administration.

The Central Government to be formed to enforce the new agreement would, it was said, include representatives of both the Croat Peasants Party and the Governmental group.—Havas.

Danzig Not Worth World Conflict

LISBON, July 13.

"The new Spanish regime is neither Italian nor German," Generalissimo Francisco Franco declared in an interview published to-day by the "Diario de Noticias."

"The new Spanish State will be Spanish and is even now preparing an important social programme," he added. "I do not believe in war and I refuse to believe in war," he said in taking up international affairs. "I see in the world to-day no question that cannot be solved by diplomatic and peaceful methods. It is hardly worthwhile for Europe to fight over Danzig."

"Spain is engaged in reconstruction work for which she needs peace. In the event of war, Spain will try as much as possible to remain neutral and will remain neutral so long as her territory, her honour and her vital interests are not affected," the Generalissimo was reported to have said.—Havas.

ALLEGED-SPY FOR GERMANY

LONDON, July 20.—Donald Adams, who is alleged to have been carrying out espionage work for Germany through the mails, was committed for trial at the Old Bailey to-day.

In the course of to-day's police court hearing ten witnesses were heard in camera.

The prosecuting counsel intimated that some of the evidence dealt with a balloon barrage, and a letter to Germany which, the prosecution said, was stopped.—Reuter.

Pro-Japanese Boycott Committee Formed In Tientsin PICKETS WILL PREVENT SALE OF BRITISH GOODS

TOKYO, July 20.

MEASURES for the boycott of British goods were formulated to-day by the anti-British boycott campaign committee in Tientsin, according to a Japanese despatch.

The measures include picketing and the appointment of special agents to popularise the boycott.

The pickets would urge firms and warehouses to suspend sales of British articles, but compensation would be paid for loss of trade.

BOMBING OF CIVILIANS

LONDON, July 20.—Mr. Arthur Henderson asked in the House of Commons to-day if the Government would enquire whether any government, with representative in China, have now obtained full information regarding cases of bombardment by Japanese aircraft of civilians; whether such information has now been sent to the League Council in accordance with its resolution of May 1939; and whether the British representative on the Council will ask for its publication forthwith.

Mr. R. A. Butler said that Viscount Halifax had received no reports on this subject from the League Secretariat.

He recalled that, at the time the resolution was adopted, the British Government, in common with other governments represented on the Council, agreed that reports received by the Council should be published provided the government furnishing them raised no objection.—Reuter.

SITUATION "TENSE"

France Urges Speed
In Moscow

PARIS, July 20.

THE Government has concluded that Britain must make further concessions to the Soviet in order to obtain an early anti-aggression agreement, according to well-informed French circles. It is considered that the tense situation is aggravated by the failure of the neutralisation legislation in the United States. It is believed that France is therefore urging Britain to accept the Soviet viewpoint as regards assistance in the event of direct aggression against the Baltic States.—Reuter.

New Instructions

PARIS, July 20.—According to diplomatic quarters here, the French Foreign Office was in constant telephonic communication with the British Foreign Office to-day, discussing the new instructions to be given to the French and British negotiators in Moscow.

It is declared that a new meeting with M. Molotov might be arranged for Friday or Saturday. In spite of all previous reassurances, the opinion now prevails that the final Anglo-French counter-proposals have been presented, and that it now rests with Moscow to decide one way or the other on the basis of what has been offered.

Hopes of a successful conclusion to the negotiations are dwindling, and some quarters express the view that the point of exhaustion has been reached by both sides.

Reports that M. Molotov intends to leave Moscow for a three-week vacation are denied. Nor is credence given to rumours concerning alleged negotiations between Germany and Poland for a settlement of the Danzig question.—Trans-Ocean.

German Warning

TANNENBURG, July 20.—General Von Brauchitsch, Commander-in-Chief of the German Army, addressing graduates of the German Military Academy here to-day, and presumably directing a warning to Poland that East Prussia is German soil, said: "The soil upon which we are meeting to-day is historically and purely German. We are not looking for a fight, but we are not afraid of it."

The afternoon newspapers in Berlin afterwards carried headlines "Braun chistch Answers Polish Warmongers."—United Press.

Tokyo Talks Continue

TOKYO, July 21.—The third conversation between the Foreign Minister, Mr. Arita, and the British Ambassador, Sir Robert Craigie, regarding the Tientsin situation, will take place at the official residence of the Foreign Minister this afternoon. Political circles attach much importance to to-day's meeting, during which they understand it will be made clear whether the alleged discrepancies between Japan and Britain are insuperable or not.

It is understood that there were several outstanding points on which the negotiators failed to agree during the second session of the conversations on Wednesday.—Domel.

French Envoy Calls On Ambassador

TOKYO, July 21.—The French Ambassador to Japan, M. Arsene Henry, called on Sir Robert Craigie, the British Ambassador, at 11 a.m. yesterday. They remained in conference for half an hour.

It is understood that the French envoy sought information from Ambassador Craigie regarding the Anglo-Japanese negotiations for a settlement of the Tientsin issue.—Domel.

Anti-British Measures

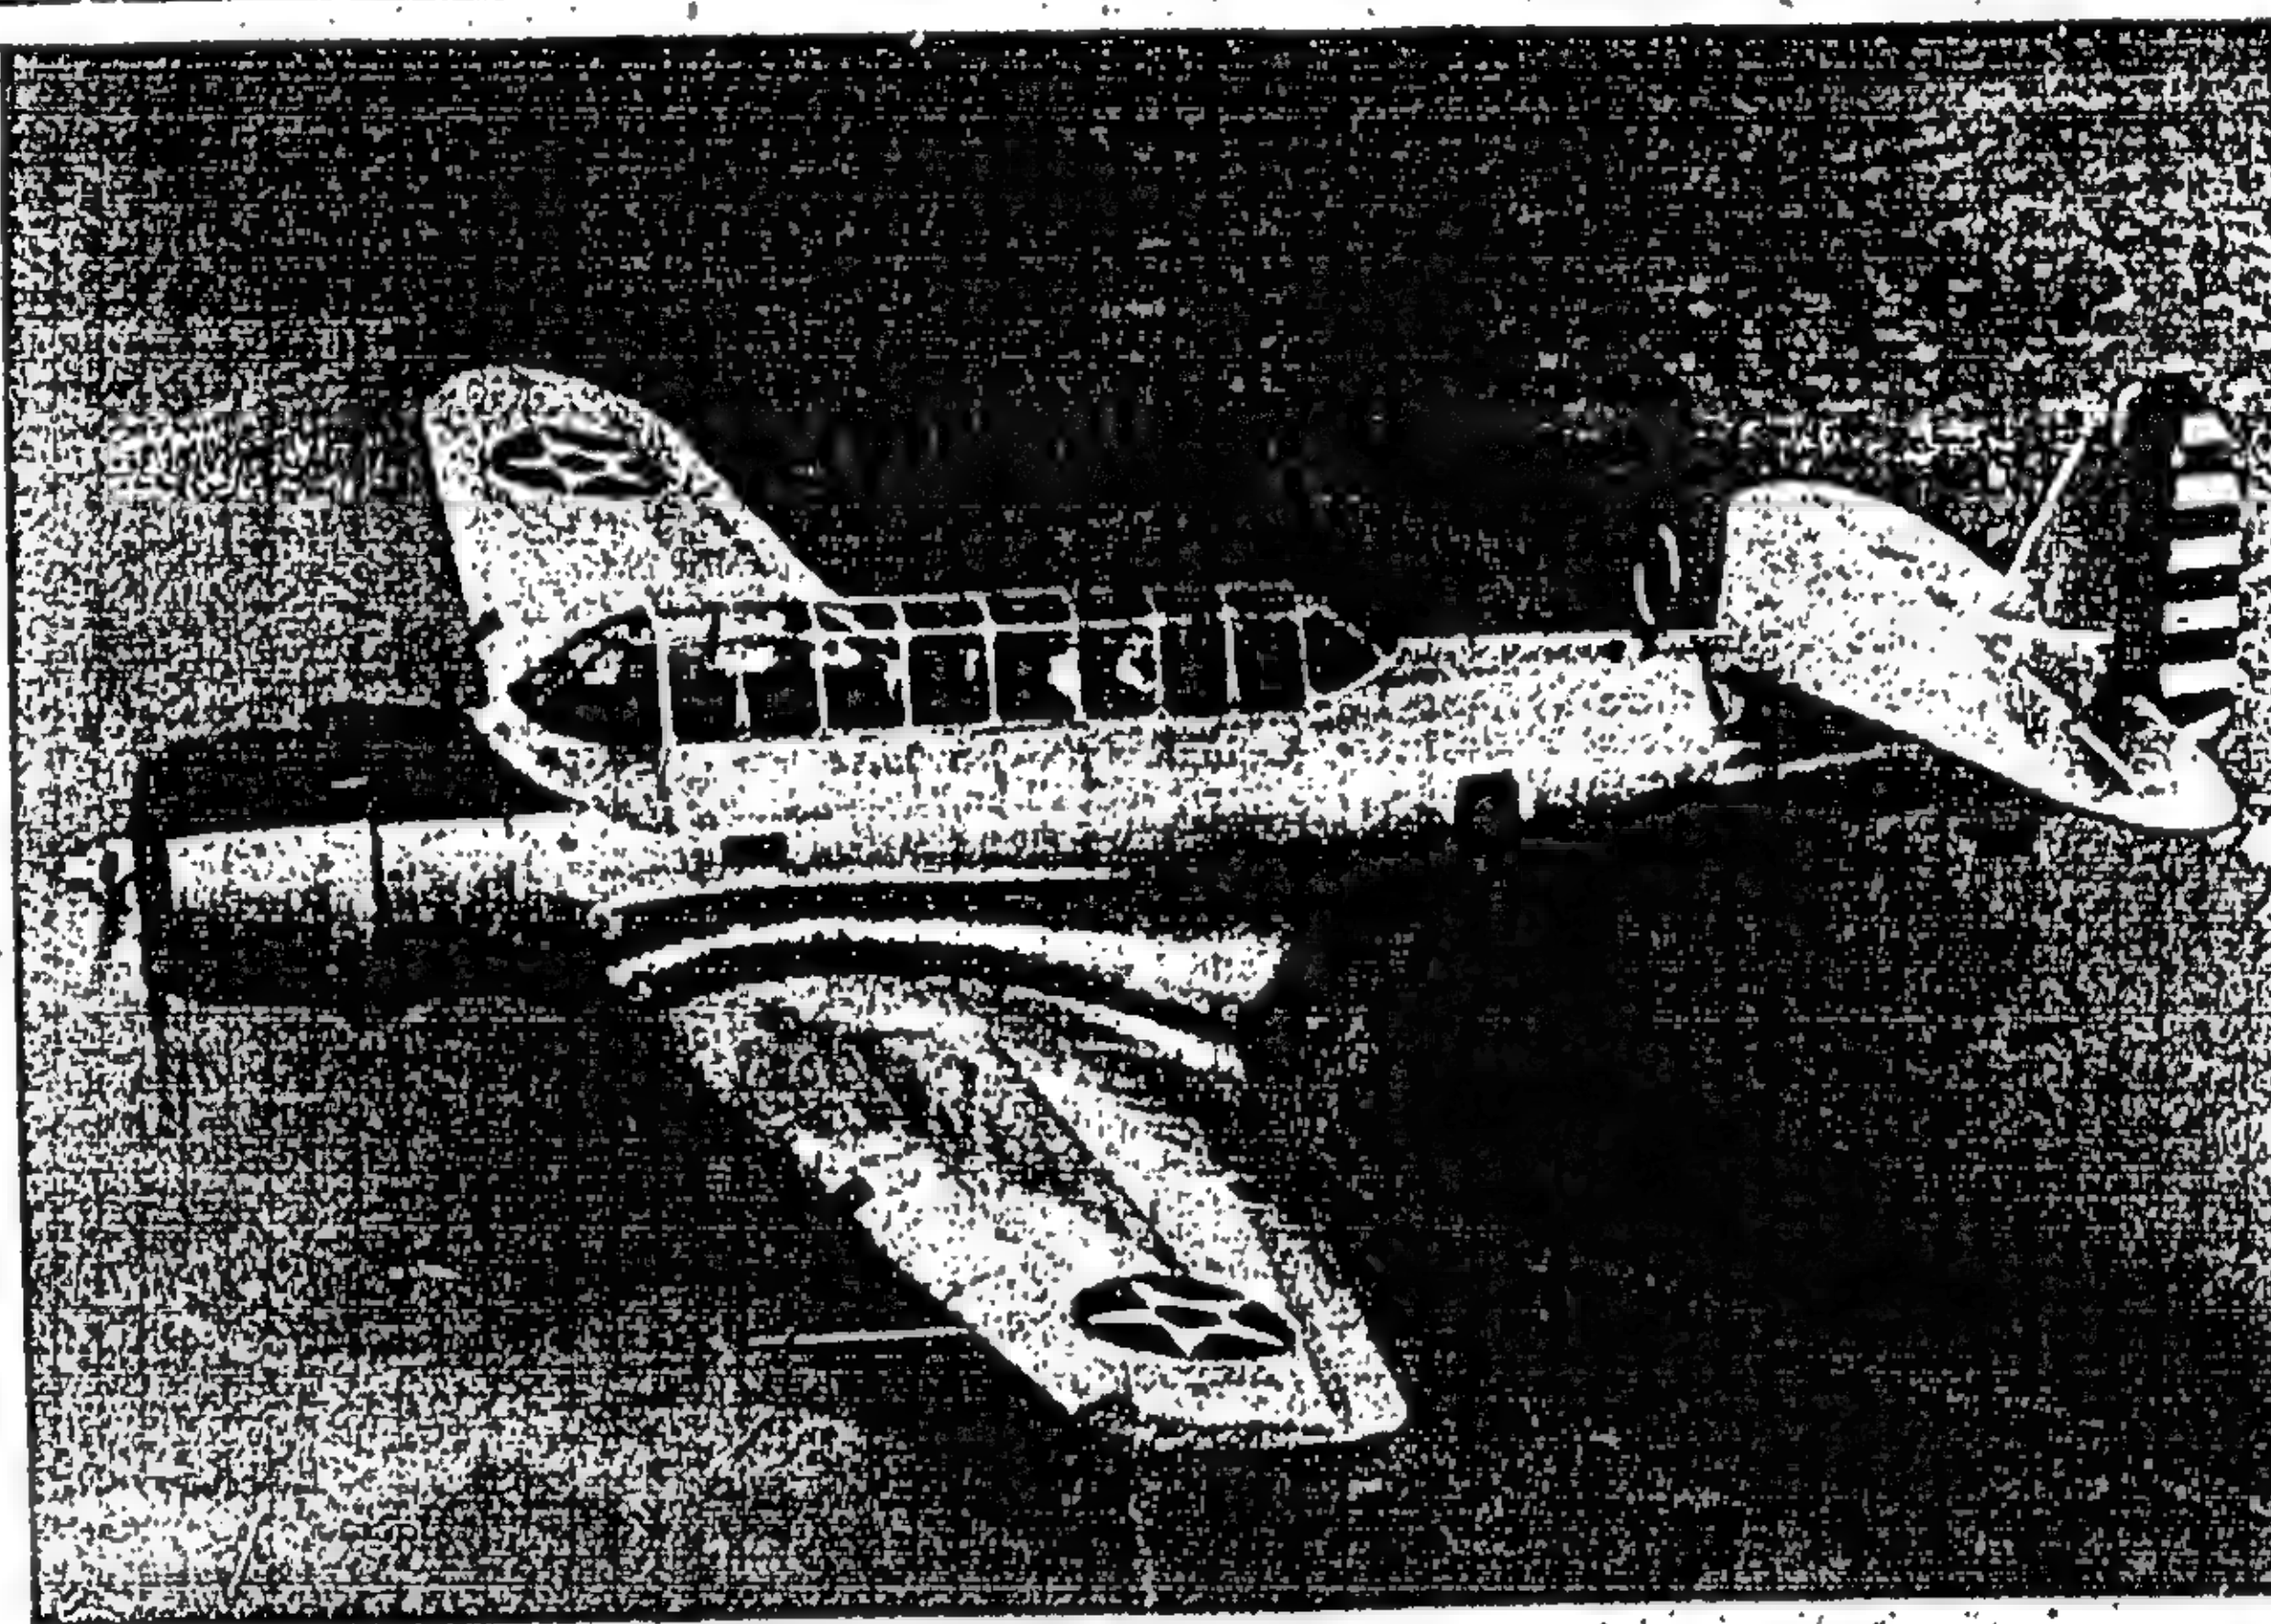

PEIPING, July 21.—Steadily gaining momentum, the anti-British movements in Peiping and Tientsin threaten to develop into a complete boycott of Britons and British goods.

The Japanese-controlled Special Municipal Government of Peiping on Thursday summoned representatives of all circles concerned to determine practicable measures for boycotting British interests by individuals, merchants and public bodies, while the anti-British campaign committee at Tientsin has also decided to start a vigorous agitation on Sunday.

According to the decisions taken by the Peiping Municipal authorities yesterday, individual Chinese citizens are urged not to use British currency, not to buy from British merchants, to refuse employment by Britons or co-operation with British interests.

Chinese merchants are requested to register through guild agents the British goods in their possession, to refrain from laying in fresh stocks of British goods, and to cancel all outstanding contracts with British interests.

Public bodies are asked to co-operate for the execution of the individual boycott and also to discontinue.—PLEASE Turn To Page 4.

AFTER 14 DAYS of searching enquiry, the Thetis tribunal adjourned to-day. It will meet formally on July 27 to fix a date for the renewal of the hearing.

DOLLAR CRASHES TO 4d.

SHANGHAI, July 21.—THE CHINESE dollar made another sensational drop at the opening of the Shanghai Market this morning.

Compared with yesterday's rates of between 4 1/2d. and 4 3/4d., the dollar was quoted at 930 o'clock this morning at 4d., the lowest rate in its history. Quotation against U.S. dollars was 7 1/2 cents.

The market is considerably weak.—United Press.

"UNITED PRESS" reports that the Hongkong dollar is being quoted at 33.65 in Shanghai.

Demand For Gold
SHANGHAI, July 20.—The prices of gold bullion soared skyward in the local market to-day as holders of Chinese dollars endeavoured to find a way out of the precipitant legal tender.

Starting from $3,200 at the opening, gold bullion rose to $3,500, $3,700, $3,800 and $3,900 during a single day. The exchange quotations of the Chinese dollar which for a moment stood at 4 1/2d. on London and 9 1/2 cents on New York, were later swept away by the bullish whirlwind and the closing quotations declined to 4 1/2d. on London and 9 and 8 1/2 cents U.S.

France To Build More Warships

PARIS, July 20.—A communiqué issued by the Minister of Marine, states that in future, a minimum number of contractor's employees would be carried in a submarine engaged in diving trials.

The captain of the submarine would be held responsible for seeing that only the minimum number of persons above the submarine's complement remained aboard for such trials.—Reuter.

Professor J. S. Haldane to-day expressed the opinion that air conditions in a submarine might be improved by carrying soda lime to absorb the poisoned air in an emergency.

He also expressed the opinion that if the men had breathed oxygen three-quarters of an hour before going into the escape chamber, they would have experienced no difficulty in escaping.

Describing another experiment, Professor Haldane said he had got four friends who were former members of the International Brigade fighting in Spain to go into a chamber in order to see whether other people reacted similarly to himself.

Same Conditions
The chamber corresponded to the atmospheric conditions of the Thetis a little before 10 o'clock on the morning of the second day, said Professor Haldane.

"One man was sitting on the floor with his head in his hands, panting and saying he was feeling very bad. He was prepared to make him ill, but I did not want to make him ill. I said to him, 'You are quite all right. Stand under these conditions. There is a certain lack of control of language, and one writes things down in a rather stupid manner.'"

"One cannot think the problem out at all, and there is a very marked effect on the mental faculties."

Insensibility
Describing the last sensations of the doomed men, Professor Haldane said they were something akin to the feelings after a strenuous physical exertion. The men would gradually become less and less sensible.

He had never seen anybody suffering from the effects of the same type of poisoning, having convulsions and throwing themselves about, or anything of that sort. It was not a sensation accompanied by acute pain.—Reuter.

Future Trials
LONDON, July 20.—In the House of Commons to-day, Mr. Geoffrey Shakespear replying to Mr. question, said that in future, a minimum number of contractor's employees would be carried in a submarine engaged in diving trials.

The captain of the submarine would be held responsible for seeing that only the minimum number of persons above the submarine's complement remained aboard for such trials.—Reuter.

JAPANESE LAND AT SWABUE

FOLLOWING two abortive attempts earlier this week, Japanese marines have succeeded in landing at Swabue, the important port 70 miles north-east of Hongkong.

The landing was effected under a withering barrage from warships and bombing planes. The Chinese defenders put up considerable resistance, and succeeded in holding off the Japanese for three hours after they landed.

The bombardment, however, completely crumbled the Chinese defences, and at 1.30 p.m. the Chinese withdrew to new lines. The Japanese are now reported to be advancing from Swabue to Yuiwei, about eight miles from Hoiang.

Only a few British and other foreign residents are at Swabue, which is the centre of an important mining district.

Congressmen Want To Go Home

WASHINGTON, July 20.—Leaders of the House of Representatives have made tentative plans to sidetrack the Japanese embargo Bills in order to adjourn as soon as possible because it is evident that the embargo measures will meet with strong opposition in both the House and Senate.

Representative Sol Eloom to-day told the "United Press" that the House Foreign Affairs Committee's attitude is not determined. He said the situation is extremely complex with six different bills pending, none of which has satisfied the majority of House members.

He added that the embargo measures are "loaded with dynamite" but did not indicate whether he is personally opposed to any of them.—United Press.

New Chamberlain Plan Reported APPEASEMENT IN OFFING?

LONDON, July 20.

IT HAS been reliably reported here that Britain is preparing a "positive peace plan" to submit to Hitler late this summer if the Government's present policy fails to ensure European tranquillity.

Official circles refuse to make any comment on the reports. Diplomatic circles said the tentative plan is as follows:—

- 1.—To ask Germany to sacrifice some armaments and to request guarantees that disarmament will be actually brought into effect.
- 2.—Britain to obtain a huge loan for Hitler to transform the German industry from a wartime to a peacetime basis. (Naal sources have denied that Sir Horace Wilson and Doctor Wohltat have had conversations on such a loan).
- 3.—Britain to consider further concessions to Germany, such as Colonies, after the arms reduction is under way.

Diplomatic circles also express doubts as to the success of such a plan, believing that Hitler will not consent to the unilateral disarmament of Germany.—United Press.

Hitler Ready For Peace Move?

BERLIN, July 20. IT IS understood that Hitler is scheduled to reconsider, with the Danzig and Naal leaders at Berntesgaden next week, what is popularly termed the "Hitler plan" for the peaceful solution of the various problems.

The plan is supposed to envisage the question of Danzig independently from that of the Polish corridor. Hitler is at present at Berntesgaden with his intimate advisers.

The general view here is that the situation is not materially altered, that military preparations are proceeding, and that the peace plan reports have been brought into evidence by the desire of all parties for some sort of compromise, which is emphasized by the press restraint in handling the Danzig Polish shooting incident.—United Press.

May Denounce Accord

ROME, July 19.—The Italian Government contemplated denouncing the Anglo-Italian Agreement of April 18, 1938, local political quarters claimed to-day.

They based their declarations partly on an article published in the "Giornale d'Italia," which is edited by Signor Virgilio Gayda and generally regarded as Signor Benito Mussolini's mouthpiece.

Signor Gayda referred to the recent "frosting" of Anglo-Italian relations, basing his article on foreign press commentaries about the nomination of Count Dino Grandi, Italian envoy in London, to the post of Minister of Justice.

He wrote, "They talk of a change in Italy's attitude towards Britain. But that is incorrect. It is Britain who, since 1935, has reversed her policy towards Italy substituting her aggressive hostility and PLEASE Turn To Page 4.

St. Anthony's Rector Dies

Passing Of Veteran
Catholic Priest

THE DEATH occurred at the Queen Mary Hospital shortly after 12 o'clock this morning of the Rev. Father John Pedrazzini, veteran of the China missionary field and well-known and popular Rector of St. Anthony's Church in Hongkong.

The late Father Pedrazzini, who was born at Intra (Lake of Maggiore) in Italy in 1884, came to China in 1914, and was associated with missionary activities at Shekhi until 1924.

Subsequently he was stationed at Macao, where he remained until he proceeded to Italy and the United States on well-deserved leave in 1933.

Even during his vacation Father Pedrazzini could not abstain from work, and until he returned to the Far East in 1934, associated himself with work in San Francisco, where he became very popular with the Portuguese colony.

On his return to China, Father Pedrazzini was appointed Rector of St. Anthony's Church at West Point, a position he held until his death. The funeral will take place to-morrow, Requiem Mass will be held at St. Anthony's Church at 8 a.m., and the cortege will pass the Monument at 9.30 a.m.

Agreement In Sight Anglo-Polish Pact Negotiations

LONDON, July 20.

"REUTER'S" diplomatic correspondent understands that the Anglo-Polish negotiations made considerable progress to-day, and signature to the agreement may be expected very shortly.

It is understood that the operation comprises two parts; firstly, the loan of £200,000 to be devoted to armament and raw materials purchased in this country; secondly, a loan of £5,000,000 cash, which the Polish Government is at liberty to expend in other countries, subject to slight reservations which are likely to be regarded as a handicap.

In conjunction with this operation, the French Government will authorise the loan of 600,000,000 francs to Poland for the purchase of war materials.—Reuter.

BRITISH PLAN REJECTED

TOKYO, July 21.—It is revealed that Mr. H. Arita had a conference with the Premier, Baron Hiranuma, on Thursday afternoon, and then held a joint conference with Foreign Office and War Office officials, with the result that it was decided that Japan should not accept the revisions contained in the memorandum Sir Robert Craigie handed to Mr. Arita on Wednesday afternoon. The "Asahi Shimbun" states that these revisions virtually amounted to a refusal of the demands contained in the memorandum Mr. Arita handed to the British Ambassador on Wednesday morning.

The "Nichi Nichi Shimbun" states that the joint conference agreed that Japan should push her original objective, even at the cost of the parity, unless Britain changes her present attitude.—Reuter.

LONDON, July 20.—There are unconfirmed rumours here that Sir Horace Wilson, Permanent Secretary to the British Treasury, has had two meetings with Doctor Holmuth, Ministerial Director of the Reich Ministry of Economy, when they discussed the possibility of a huge international loan to Germany. HANDSOME GIGOLOS WERE "MENACE TO THE CITY"

And Lonely Ladies Are Left Forlorn

NEW YORK HAS LOST ITS "SOCIAL ESCORTS"—HANDSOME YOUNG MEN WITH NICE MANNERS WHO WOULD, FOR A FEE, HIT THE HIGH SPOTS WITH LONELY LADIES WITH MONEY TO SPEND.

Ted Peckham, 24-years-old United States university graduate, who started a bureau to put the handsome young men and the lonely ladies in touch, has been denounced as "a menace to the city and to visitors" by Justice William R. Bayes, who found him guilty of operating an employment agency without a licence.

He fined him $50, forbade him to supply any more escorts until he gets a licence, and gave him a suspended sentence of three months in the workhouse (a modified American form of imprisonment).

As it was the Licence Commissioner Paul Moss who led the exposure of his methods in court, it seems unlikely that Peckham will get his licence.

"We have been trying to stamp out this social service evil for the last four years," Moss told the court in New York.

"They send out escorts without investigation, and send them to women whom they have not investigated. Women who are overcharged are afraid to go to court because of the publicity."

Two of the witnesses against Peckham were formerly escorts. One, handsome young policeman Thomas Farrell, who concealed his identity to get into Peckham's service, told how he received an order to take a woman to the theatre and dinner. "Peckham's secretary," he related, "told me I would get four dollars out of the ten-dollar ($2) fee for working from 4 p.m. to 8 p.m."

"If the lady kept me later the fee would be ten dollars from 8 p.m. until midnight, and five dollars for every two hours after that. I was to get two-fifths of all fees."

COULDN'T GET FEES

"I met the lady at the Hotel Astor and she gave me ten dollars for expenses. We went to the theatre and had a couple of drinks. I spent nearly four dollars in expenses and returned the balance."

The next day, said Farrell, he had trouble in collecting the fee from Peckham.

Another witness, Charles L. Seely, who spoke with an English accent, said he also had difficulty in collecting his fees.

London knows Mr. Peckham very well, because it was in November 1936 that he arrived to start a branch of his business, the London Social Escort Bureau.

By December he had 30 personable young men working for him, accompany lonely ladies to dinner, theatres, dances, receiving a proportion of the fees handed over.

Soon he was reporting it a success, but by the following September he was bewailing the fact that English girls refused to pay for male escorts.

"GO GETTERS"

"English girls are 'go-getters' and don't have to hire a friend for the evening," he said, "they know the sort of young man they want and see that they find him."

He said then that he had branches

in all parts of the world—in Paris, Rome, Vienna, and Budapest as well as London and New York—and that he made £4,000 a year.

Later in the month, Mr. Peckham arrived in New York with the announcement that seven British peers had signed to appear as a chorus in a New York revue.

In London, the peers mentioned indignantly denied the suggestion.

Byron Tomb Opened

WAS it really the body of the poet Byron that the British frigate brought home from Greece more than a century ago? Did the Greeks, for whose independence Byron died fighting, retain their hero's heart and brain?

For many years these questions have remained unanswered—for many years the persistent legend worried the vicar of Hucknall, Nottinghamshire, the Rev. T. G. Barber, in whose church the poet was buried 114 years ago.

His opportunity came when matters of archaeological interest had to be probed in that part of his ancient church where Byron is buried.

Consent of the Home Office and the present Lord Byron had to be obtained and all the witnesses were pledged to secrecy.

The work was carried out with the utmost reverence.

EMBALMED

It took some time for the workmen to open the vault. Descending into it after tests were made to prove the safety of the air, the vicar found an urn inscribed:

"Within this urn are deposited the heart and brain of the deceased Lord Noel Byron."

Close to it was a leaden casket in which was the coffin with the body of Byron himself. The leaden case had been torn open and the lid of the coffin was loose.

Ate Four Ounces Of Arsenic—Lived

AHMEDABAD.

KAY KHUSHRAV BARJORJI VAKIL, Parsee youth aged 20, did this to prove his faith in Zoroaster, the prophet by whom Parsees swear: he swallowed four ounces of arsenic, enough, it is stated, to kill 900 people, and lived.

He swallowed the arsenic at a gathering of Parsees, Hindus and Moslems, having previously announced that he would either take a large dose of poison, pour molten lead over his body or hang himself by a rope and survive owing to his belief in the Zoroastrian religion.

Mr. Vakil distributed to the gathering a quantity of what he ate with a view to proving that it really was arsenic that he was to swallow.

After explaining the importance of Zoroastrianism, he took the poison, and in case the gathering might suspect that he was taking an antidote he threw away a glass of water which was offered to him.

The result of an analysis of the Arsenic by Dr. M. S. Shah, Professor of Chemistry, Gujarat College, Ahmedabad, showed that what Mr. Vakil swallowed was 99.749 arsenical.

"ALL COULD DO IT"

In an interview Mr. Vakil stated that what he achieved was "entirely due to his great faith in Zoroastrianism."

Any person, he added who was "zealous to imbibe the doctrines of this religion could perform the feats of which I am capable."

Zoroastrianism was the religion of the Persian people before they became converted to Mohammedanism. The faith preached by the prophet Zoroaster (or Zarathustra) is a dualism teaching that Ormazd, lord of light and goodness, carries on ceaseless war against Ahriman and the hosts of evil spirits who dwell in darkness. Ormazd created man to aid him, and eventually the belief was—the good kingdom will be attained.

He Wants Lion Farm By Thames

NEXT spring Mr. Stanley Turpin, of Sandhills Meadows, Shepperton, hopes to open the first lion-breeding farm in England. If he finds the trade to circuses and zoos justifies it, he will stock his estate up to 300 animals. The farm is to be on a 12-acre estate near the Thames.

Mr. Turpin has had no experience in breeding lions, but is confident he can manage them. He has just returned after a three years' tour of South Africa and proposes to join forces with an experienced lion breeder now on his way from Africa.

Sunbury Council have refused to approve his scheme, but Mr. Turpin says that they have no power to stop him.

He said: "I am going to house my lions in lairs of stones, so they will live under natural conditions."

"I don't see why the neighbourhood should be frightened. Lions take no notice of you unless you provoke them. My wife is not at all perturbed."

Traders Ask Yard For Help

SMALL traders and cafe owners in the Elephant and Castle district intend to petition Scotland Yard for protection against London's "Dead-End kids"—gangs of youths who are wrecking and ruining their businesses.

Mark Selby, Jewish owner of a milk bar in the Walworth-road, a war-wounded veteran with four children, committed suicide after he had been beaten up and his premises wrecked by the gangs because he refused to supply them with free cigarettes and refreshments.

Recently gangsters marched into the milk bar he once owned and threatened the manageress. Two plain-clothes men from Southwark Police Station, who had been posted to the vicinity, appeared and the men quickly vanished.

WINDOW SMASHED

A few minutes later the plate-glass window of a jeweller's shop in Walworth-road was smashed and several rings stolen. Later a free fight started in a cafe in the nearby London-road. A man threw a cup of scalding tea into a customer's face.

The night attendant at the cafe blew the police whistle. He bought some days ago, but no one ran to his assistance.

Police officers with a tender were too busy dealing with another disturbance opposite the Trocadero Cinema.

"Every night is a night of terror," the manageress of the late Mr. Selby's milk bar said.

"Our takings were about £25 a day. Now they have dropped to £5. Between 8 o'clock and midnight, usually our most profitable time, we have drawn less than £1."

"It means ruin for this bar. We will have to close down, and several people will be out of work."

'Mainspring' of Mayfair Thieves Gets 3 Years

Judge on Crime Under Cloak of Friendship

THE following sentences were passed by the Recorder, Sir Gerald Dodson, at the Old Bailey recently on the four men accused in the Mayfair jewel thefts case:

Victor Frederick Cochrane Hervey, 23 (son of Lord Herbert Hervey and nephew of the Marquis of Bristol), was sent to penal servitude for three years.

William Goodwin (30) received two years' imprisonment; George Ernest Arthur Hering (23), 18 months, and Geoffrey Coop (24), nine months.

The Recorder told Hervey that he realised he was the main-spring of the conspiracies and that the crimes were of the most serious description. "How low you have stooped you alone know," declared the judge.

To Hering the Recorder said: "Your part in this is of the most kind. You betrayed a friend, Mrs. Daubeny."

Hervey and Goodwin had been found guilty of conspiring with others to steal property belonging to Mrs. Daubeny, of Queen Street, Mayfair, and Mrs. Gabrielle Burley, of Seymour Place, Park Lane.

Hering (who has been referred to by the prosecution as Peter Proud) and Coop had pleaded guilty to conspiring to steal jewellery belonging to Mrs. Daubeny. Hering had also pleaded guilty to conspiring to steal Mrs. Burley's property.

Three-Day Trial

During the three-day trial, Hering gave evidence for the prosecution.

Detective Inspector Berry said that Coop was a former public schoolboy and had gone to a military college. He obtained a commission in an infantry regiment in January, 1935, but because he was unable to keep out of debt and because he was connected with numerous worthless cheques and appeared to have had no interest in his work, he was called on to resign in December that year. About that time an allowance which he had from his family ceased. He was later a salesman selling silk stockings, and in February, 1937, he enlisted in the Royal Army Ordnance Corps as a private.

He came to London in April, 1938, and as a result of being convicted of

NORTH AUSTRALIA AIR PATROL

DARWIN. The North Australian Air Force station will be opened about a year before it was expected with the arrival here shortly of a skeleton unit, consisting of one squadron of Avro-Anson bombers.

The Federal Government has given no explanation of the move, but it is understood to be due to the growing world tension.

The squadron will use the Ross Smith airport, this being the first occasion on which an Air Force station has been opened on a civil aerodrome.

Portable steel huts and hangars have been erected for the accommodation of men and machines.

The bombers will be engaged in reconnaissance duty, probably combining coastguard service and the patrolling of the Timor and Arafura coasts.

GERMAN PURCHASES OF MANGANESE

CAPE TOWN.

South African exports of raw materials to Germany and Italy, particularly Germany, have grown considerably in recent years. At present Germany is by far the largest importer of the Union's manganese.

Last year Germany headed the list as the Union's chief foreign purchaser, having taken £4,992,336 worth of exports, compared with £4,982,050 in 1937. Among the exported raw materials were 234,000 tons of manganese ore, valued at £355,237, copper bar to the value of £44,492, and 9,396 tons of scrap metal valued at £5,070. Germany also purchased a considerable quantity of copper ore from South West Africa valued at £47,154, and £97,897 worth of vanadium ore.

Aided Man Of 80—Was Killed

AN allegation that a man was killed when he went to the aid of another man, aged 80, was made at Skipton, Yorkshire, recently.

Richard William Matthews, 57-year-old quarryman of Barnoldswick, was charged with the murder of William Taylor, deputy at Craven Lodging House, Barnoldswick.

The prosecuting solicitor said Matthews would not have the protection of the defence of drink, because he was not drunk.

He had been visiting certain clubs, and returned to the lodging house perfectly sober, it was suggested.

CHALLENGE TO FIGHT

He made his way to a room where cooking took place. He was in a truculent mood and threw out a general challenge to fight.

William Henry Ward, aged 80, said he would like to be quiet.

Matthews advanced in such a threatening way that Taylor, said, "Do not strike the old man."

Then Matthews, added the solicitor, made a rush at Taylor, knocked him and the old man to the floor, and kicked Taylor in the stomach.

While Taylor was groaning there, Matthews, it was alleged, said, "I will learn these from interfering," and kicked him savagely in the face.

Matthews pleaded not guilty, and was committed for trial.

Fleet Street.

Mr. Jacob Epstein, interviewed recently on the proposed exhibition of his new statue "Adam" at Blackpool at a shilling a time, said:

"My first reaction was rage. I wanted to stop it. But on second thoughts I have changed my mind. After all, art is for everybody or it is nothing. My statues are not made just for the intellectuals of London. Let us see what the average man and woman think of my 'Adam.' Let us hear what the people of Lancashire have to say about it."

"WHAT BLACKPOOL SAYS"

"If the statue is properly shown to them as a work of art, not as a sensational exhibition—a peep-show, I have no objection at all. On the whole, I feel now that it is rather a compliment. I shall be most interested to hear what Blackpool holiday crowds have to say. Perhaps they will not reject it as the Tate Gallery would have rejected it, as the Tate Gallery did reject my 'Genesis' when it was offered to them."

"As for the owner, honestly I don't know who he is or what his name is. But assuredly I have not got £7,000 for the statue or anything like it. Financially the sale has proved me very little. It is said that the owner is an Australian goldminer. Well, perhaps he is. I don't know. It is nothing to do with me. Perhaps the statue should have been bought for

AN African prince, Usman Liman, 39-year-old son of the Emir of Katsina, who arrived in England on Tuesday by air from Kano, Nigeria, on his first visit, had the biggest thrill of his life recently for two-pence.

Accompanied by a reporter and Mr. P. F. Masterman-Smith, an English official from Nigeria, he made his first trip on the London Underground Railway.

Usman had heard many wonderful tales about London, but he was sceptical about the railway that "travelled under the houses and streets."

When I met the Emir (states the reporter) and his two sons at their London hotel, writes a News Chronicle reporter, they greeted me by taking my hand in both of theirs.

Change In Army Council

A change in the constitution of the Army Council was notified in a recent "London Gazette." The effect of it is that Engineer Vice-Adm. Sir Harold Brown, Director-General of Munitions Production, is no longer a member.

The post of Director-General of Munitions Production was created in 1936. In 1937, when the Army Council was reorganised, Sir Harold Brown was appointed to take over the duties of Master-General of the Ordnance from Lt.-Gen. Sir Hugh Elles, who relinquished that post "to facilitate a reorganisation" under which the two departments were merged.

It seems that in future the Army Council will not have either a Director-General of Munitions Production or a Master-General of the Ordnance. This suggests that the setting up of the Ministry of Supply, at present only in an embryo state, has been anticipated.

The duties connected with the Ordnance will continue to be done by the Director-General of Munitions.

Although Sir Harold Brown has not yet left the War Office, sections of his department are daily being removed to the Adelphi, where the Minister of Supply is to have his new quarters.

THE BLACKPOOL EXHIBITION

"Very High Class Way"

Arrangements have been concluded for the exhibition of "Adam," the latest work of Jacob Epstein, at Blackpool during the season. Mr. Lawrence Wright, the producer and music publisher, states that he proposes to exhibit the "Adam" statue until the close of the season in Blackpool, when he intends to take it to New York.

Mr. Wright said that the statue will be on show at the "Castle," a building on North Shore that has been empty for thirty years. The building is being elaborately redecorated, and the statue, said Mr. Wright, will be shown "in a very high class way."

Mr. Wright says that he does not know the name of the owner of the statue, but he is emphatic that Mr. Epstein cannot object to the proposed exhibition. "He cannot object," he said firmly. "The statue has been bought outright without restrictions or conditions." Admission at a shilling a head, he added, "will bring £20,000 to Blackpool."

ADVICE TO NURSING MOTHERS

It is very important, doctors say, not to overtax your system immediately after the birth of a child. When you are feeding baby yourself, you should take plenty of easily digested nourishment.

For that reason, doctors throughout China recommend Horlicks. They have proved that Horlicks stimulates the appetite, promotes sound sleep and strengthens the whole system. Also Horlicks increases the supply of maternal milk and ensures the success of breast feeding.

Get Horlicks to-day from your store.

Chitral Departure Delayed

Because one of her propellers fouled a steel cable as she was leaving Shanghai for Hongkong, the
P. & O. liner Chitral will not be able to depart for England at noon tomorrow as scheduled.

Although the mishap did not unduly delay the liner on the trip from Shanghai to Hongkong, it will be necessary for her to go into dock tomorrow for the removal of the wire.
The work will be completed within 24 hours, and it is expected that the Chitral will sail from Kowloon wharves at 11 a.m. on Sunday.

It is hoped that the lost day will be made up on the run from Hongkong to Singapore, after which port the liner will pick up its scheduled itinerary.

DOWNPOUR STOPS GARDEN PARTY

LONDON, July 20.—The weather robbed 10,000 guests at the Buckingham Palace garden party of the opportunity of attending the most democratic of the season's Palace functions.

The garden party had to be cancelled at the last moment owing to a
of guests had arrived.

The guests waited for half an hour in the salons overlooking the terrace, watching the rain falling on the deserted lawns and the sodden marques.

Officials of the Lord Chamberlain's Department then inspected the grounds and told the guests that the party could not be held.—Reuter

Churchill Has Opposition

Diehards Don't Want Him In Cabinet

LONDON, July 20.
A NUMBER of Conservative and National Liberal members of the House of Commons have pledged themselves to unconditional support of the Prime Minister, Mr. Chamberlain and his policy.

The members of the group regard it as their foremost task to frustrate the inclusion of Mr. Winston Churchill in the Cabinet.

The group, which is headed by Mr.
S. Liddell, originally consisted of eight Conservative M.P.s, who were joined to-day by two National Liberal Members. Mr. Liddell has announced that only such members of the group would accept Chamberlain's leadership without questioning, and who would pledge themselves to support the Prime Minister and his policy unconditionally.

Mr. Winston Churchill, it is reported, this afternoon again had a long conversation with Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax.—Trans-Ocean.

APPEASEMENT IN OFFING?

Incomprehension for friendship and understanding.

"Italy will draw direct conclusions from this change in attitude at the opportune moment."

"Italy is determined to defend her rights and will pursue her course together with her true friends—whatever may happen."—Havas.

LONDON, July 15.—Commenting on rumours of possible Italian declination of the Anglo-Italian Accords of April 10, 1938, British quarters pointed out to-day that the agreement had already, for a long while, existed only in theory.

Nevertheless, they stressed, Britain would certainly not take the initiative towards denouncing the treaty, for it would leave Italy free to resume liberty of action.

Rome, too, understood this, but it was improbable that the initiative would be in its interests, the same quarters said.—Havas.

Danzig Apologies

WARSAW, July 20.—The Danzig
Senate is reported to have expressed regret to the Polish Commissioner for the shooting of a Customs official named Budziewicz.

According to the Polish official version, a Danzig Customs official, Budziewicz, was shot by two members of the Nazi organisation, crossed the frontier this morning and met Budziewicz, who ordered them to halt.

The Danzig press maintains that the shooting occurred in Danzig territory, but the Polish official version categorically declares that Budziewicz was shot nine yards from the frontier on the Polish side.—Reuter.

Polish Official Detained

WARSAW, July 20.—An incident involving the arrest and subsequent release of Colonel Sobocynski of the Polish Commissariat in Danzig is reported from unofficial sources, which state that the arrest took place after the police had boarded the ship.

The Government majority was
2,539 as compared with 6,671 at the last election, when the late Sir Philip Sassoon won a straight fight with the Liberal candidate, polling 13,359.

Although only about 60 per cent.
of the electorate polled, the decline in the Conservative vote is significant, as the total poll at the bye-election

Malta Talks

MALTA, July 20.—The Anglo-French general staff talks are continuing here, discussing problems in Europe, the Near East and the Far East.

A number of French naval and air force officers arrived to-day to discuss problems of mutual interest with the British naval commander-in-chief of the Mediterranean.—

Fate Of Danzig

LONDON, July 14.—The fate of Danzig would be definitely settled only in one year's time, Reich-
Chancellor Adolf Hitler told Gauleiter
Albert Forster, leader of the Free City's Nazis, Germans back from Berlin declared to-day.

Solution of the Danzig problem would be attained in three stages, Hitler was also said to have told Herr Forster.

First, about the time of the September Nuremberg Nazi Congress this year, the Danzig Senate would proclaim that all citizens of the Free City were German although it would not announce any change in the City's legal status.

Secondly, the Senate would announce that the railways and harbour of Danzig would be transferred to German control.

Finally, it would announce a similar transfer of the Customs administrations.

Notification of the three decisions, to be reached within a year, would be sent simultaneously to Berlin and Warsaw, the German persons interviewed to-day asserted. There would therefore remain only one thing to do—recognize an accomplished fact.—

Soviet Manoeuvres

MOSCOW, July 21.—The Baltic Fleet is conducting fleet manoeuvres of all types of ships, some of which are new.

The Commander of the Navy, M. N.
G. Kuznetsov, reviewed the fleet today.

"We have a splendid fleet, ready to defend the country to the last drop of blood," he said.—United Press.

Bit Of Their Own Medicine

Germans Object To Propaganda

LONDON, July 20.
ACCORDING to the "Evening Standard," Sir Neville Henderson, British Ambassador to Berlin, has requested the British Government to use its influence to induce Commander Stephan King-Hall to desist from his propaganda in Germany by means of news-letters, which he sends to all parts of the world, and which recently formed the subject of a biting six-column attack by Dr.
Josef Goebbels in the German press.

The paper asserts that the Ambassador pointed out that propaganda of this nature rendered his own position very difficult, and that his cessation was an indispensable condition of any improvement in Anglo-German relations.

The paper also claims that from this, some Cabinet members draw the inference that Sir Neville Henderson still believes in the possibility of a real of the appeasement policy.—

LISBON, July 13.

"The new Spanish regime is neither Italian nor German," Generalissimo Francisco Franco declared in an interview published to-day by the "Diario de Noticias."

"The new Spanish State will be Spanish and is even now preparing an important social programme," he added. "I do not believe in war and I refuse to believe in war," he said in taking up international affairs.

"I see in the world to-day no question that cannot be solved by diplomatic and peaceful methods. It is hardly worthwhile for Europe to fight over Danzig."

"Spain is engaged in reconstruction work for which she needs peace. In the event of war, Spain will try as much as possible to remain neutral and will remain neutral so long as her territory, her honour and her vital interests are not affected," the Generalissimo was reported to have said.—Havas.

Voters Swing From Govt.

Reduced Majority In Bye-Election

LONDON, July 20.

THE bye-election at Hythe due to the death of Sir Philip Sassoon, resulted to-day in the Conservatives retaining the seat.

Mr. Brabner (Cons) polled 12,016, while Mr. Darval (Liberal) was second with 9,577, and Mr. St. John Philby (British People's Party) was last with a meagre 576 votes.

"10"

The statement that the Vauxhall Ten gives most for your money is based on simple facts. Independent springing; hydraulic brakes; controlled synchromesh; over 40 m.p.g. (petrol); 3,500 m.p.g. (oil). Is there another Ten which can boast these features? Yet they are but a few of the many to be found in this Vauxhall.

Illustration shows the New '10' Coupe. With all the comfort, easy driving and economy features of the Saloon models.

May we demonstrate?

Year Of Din

NOW and then a small voice is raised against the noise nuisance. One wonders why it is drowned by the blare which is modernity, or do the great mass of the public like to move in an atmosphere of false excitement and noise as an anodyne to the disturbing events of the outside world?

Noise can be stimulating, even intoxicating, but it is also tiring, and in one quarter there has been a call for Government action, as the number of inconsiderate noise-makers increases every day, and the effect upon the mental health of the community is held to be serious.

As a contributor to the encyclopaedia of 1939, the "mike" has much to answer for, from the adenoal accents of the crooner to the violent rhetoric of those Continental politicians whose utterances have become as the thundering of the gods, reaching to every corner of the earth.

There is no escape—except to turn it off at the source. There is a law of sorts in Hongkong to prevent the disturbing of the peace after 10 p.m. but that does not stop the owners of the super-super-something-or-the-other.

Those who are compelled to listen willy-nilly, and who esteem escape from those stirring messages which shake the world would acclaim a tightening up of whatever restrictions there are against blaring loud-speakers.

The Army Of To-day

The fathers of the youths now being cabled up for compulsory service at home are the men who helped to initiate the change in the military attitude towards the rank and file. When they stepped forward in 1914, it was to join an Army bound by that iron discipline which the civilian found irksome and difficult to understand. The "First Hundred Thousand" did much to break down the old barriers in an institution that was ripe for change. They proved beyond doubt that the fighting spirit of an Army is not necessarily governed by discipline that could detect insubordination in the twitching of an eye.

There was much to admire in the pre-war Army. In its efficiency and unquestioning obedience, but that superb fighting machine was fashioned in a mould that was often rough-edged. A new spirit is abroad to-day. Gone is the sergeant-major of the "You broke your mother's heart but you won't break mine" type; the instructor to-day is a teacher in the modern manner.

Perhaps no greater example of the change of heart in officialdom

—Strube in the "Daily Express"

If you say
often enough

—people will believe it: that is the theory of GOEBBELS and he is practising it in Danzig.

DENNIS CLARKE

GOEBBELS has two cardinal principles: First, hammer home your own point of view till people believe it or go dotty. He knows that if you tell most people one thing all the time, and they hear no contradiction, they will come to believe it eventually. Secondly, counter opposing propaganda by picking on its weakest points, suppressing some essential part of it. Roosevelt's peace appeal was handled in this way by the Goebbels Press.

Another function of Dr. Goebbels's propaganda is to work up good will abroad for Germany. In this he has not been successful, so we shall pass it over.

The rules for successful propaganda are laid down by Hitler in his "Mein Kampf." Let us examine them.

HITLER says that propaganda has no morality. It is a means to an end. It must be directed to the masses. A million workmen are more desirable booty for the propagandist than a handful of aesthetes.

Propaganda must be aimed at people's feelings, not at their heads. The masses are feminine, like women, to be wooed through their emotions," writes Hitler.

"The masses understand only a master. The rougher and more brutal your phrasing the more people you will convince."

Hitler wrote this from bitter experience of trying to convert people by sweet reason.

In fact, Hitler has the demagogue's contempt for the mass of people. Their receptivity is limited, he writes, their understanding small, their selfishness immense. The last point is interesting. Dr. Goebbels is now busy blackening the character of the Mr. Chamberlain whom he described last September as a man of peace.

HITLER maintains that speech is the Queen of all propaganda instruments. People will not spend a penny to buy a newspaper they disagree with. They may throw away a free pamphlet, however forcibly written. But the spoken word, public or private, is all powerful.

He puts his finger on one striking advantage of speech. A writer does could be quoted that the issue of a booklet, "A Welcome to the Militiaman," a bit of good sense and brotherliness in which the reasons for military practices are explained to the "rookie" of 1939. The old barrack square has lost its terrors, and the pathway to efficiency is easier to tread.

not see his audience. A speaker can see from the faces of his audience what effect he is having and attune himself accordingly.

He admits he learned his tactics from the Communists. He learned, he confesses, that in a big meeting the individual's personality is sunk in the audience's. "Though a worm, he becomes part of a big dragon," he comments.

One of the first things to do is to shake a man in his own beliefs; then you may convert him. Stun his critical faculties with pagant and noise.

Be simple. Hitler says men understand right and wrong, black and white, truth and lie. No half measures. The speaker is an angel. His opponents devils.

Don't be objective. Put all the guilt on your opponent, even if he does not deserve it. "Never admit the glimmer of justice on the other side," he says. The masses, writes the Fuehrer, cannot distinguish where the foreign injustice ends and their own injustice begins.

FINALLY the propagandist must concentrate hate on one enemy at a time. Go for Czechoslovakia, for instance, while buttering up Poland and Jugoslavia. Their turn will come.

Just now Goebbels is concentrating hate on England, even forgetting Russia.

What a brilliant executor of his chief's ideas Dr. Goebbels has proved. Hitler himself confesses he is astonished at the results obtained by following the above rules.

I often wonder if Dr. Goebbels would get a job on the British Council, our propaganda organisation.

This fact astonishes the average Briton. It baffles him that our policy can be so absurdly misunderstood.

BUT he is not liked. No squares are named after him. For days before Goebbels' arrival in conquered Vienna last year I had to wade through slabby newspaper articles explaining what a nice fellow was "Unser Herr Doktor" ("Our Mr. Doctor"). His reception was cold compared with Goering's and Hitler's.

But the doctor has more valuable qualities than popularity. Hitler first discovered the brilliant organising ability of the little Doctor of Philosophy from Heidelberg University. He once described Goebbels as "Geschelt," which means "clever," not always in the best sense.

So Goebbels withdrew to his propaganda. His triumph is to have transformed millions of comfortable, docile Germans into dauntless Siegfrieds eager to die for Hitler tomorrow—and kept them geared up to that point. Results mark him as one of the most successful men alive.

How has he done it?

ODDLY enough, he copied our methods. Our wartime stories of dead German soldiers being boiled down to provide gun lubricants are the admitted original models of all Dr. Goebbels' paraphernalia.

Hitler himself writes in "Mein Kampf": "It was during the war that we had the best chance of estimating the tremendous results to be obtained from a propaganda system properly carried out. The lack on our side was exploited by the enemy so efficiently that one could say it proved a work of real genius."

"In that propaganda I found admirable sources of instruction."

Hitler instances the effect on his own Bavarian regiment of British leaflets which urged the Bavarians to betray the Prussians, who had got them in the mess they were.

Hitler's first party job was propaganda chief. Goebbels merely took over his chief's ideas and put his brains into organising a propaganda machine to get them over.

Goebbels seized control of the media of news and opinion: newspapers, radio, books, theatres. He forbade anybody but the party to hold public meetings. Those who disobeyed went to concentration camps.

Angriff (Attack) became his personal newspaper. Voelkischer Beobachter (People's Observer) became party newspaper. All other papers had to submit their copy for party approval. Propaganda officials watched plays for heresies. Not even comedians escaped censorship.

Meanwhile Nazi teachers took over education. Little Fritz is taught from birth to be a Nazi and nothing else. Modern Germany is like an isolation ward. Nothing enters from the outside world. The diet is provided exclusively by Dr. Goebbels.

DEATH OF SIR DAN GODFREY

Famed Musical Director

London, July 20. The death has occurred of Sir Dan Godfrey, well-known musician and Musical Director of the Bournemouth Corporation. Reuter Bulletin.

Dan Godfrey, who was born in London in June, 1868, came of a family associated with British music for generations. His grandfather, his father and two uncles were bandmasters of Guards regiments.

Educated in London and Germany, he entered the Royal College of Music in 1884, studying the clarinet under Lazarus and harmony with A. Cuddeback. He was also taught by his father and by J. Hartmann, an expert in military band orchestration. In 1890 he gained the bandmastership diploma of the Royal Academy of Music and was appointed conductor of the Landwehr Military Band and of the Corps of Commissioners.

In 1891 he toured South Africa as musical director of the Standard Opera Co. and got a post as conductor of the Globe Theatre, Johannesburg. Returning to England, he provided the orchestra for "Venice in London" in 1892, and was musical adviser to Olympia, Ltd., in 1893.

His life work, however, was done at Bournemouth. He contracted with the Corporation to supply a band of 31 for summer and winter concerts in 1893 and next year was appointed resident musical director. In 1899 the Municipality took over the control of music and Godfrey's band was converted into the Bournemouth Municipal Orchestra, the first of its kind in England. His reputation is based mainly on the high standard of his symphony concerts, which, with more popular performances, he ran for about 30 consecutive seasons. During that period he gave in the winter nearly 6,000 works, including about 1,500 by British composers, a large number being first performances.

His most ambitious undertaking was the Easter Festival in 1922, when a series of high class concerts resulted in a substantial profit in the year. He was knighted. He controlled an annual expenditure of £30,000 and the repertoire of his orchestra contained practically every classical symphony, overture and concerto, as well as a representative selection of modern works. Widely known as a lecturer on music, he was an acknowledged authority on military band transcription. His consistent support of British composers was again recognized in 1924 by his election as an Honorary Fellow of the Royal College of Music.

Godfrey was the only British conductor at the Wagner Festival in Berlin in 1904.

Dalai Lama Found?

Five Year Old Boy On Way To Lhasa

Chungking, July 19. Chinese reports say that the 14th Dalai Lama, Political Poet of Tibet, who is a five year old "reincarnation" of his predecessor, left Taersu City, in the pasture lands of Chinghai, on July 13 for Lhasa, the capital of the "Hermit Kingdom."

The report says that the Dalai Lama is being escorted by Ma Yun-hai and a special commission of Chinese Government and Tibetan officials. The five year old youth possesses piercing eyes, a quiet disposition and a dignified face. It is said that when he received Chinese reports they were all surprised that he could make his way alone and on foot without losing his police and his valet. It was said that "no one could do his voice, or did he seem to be nervous or uneasy."

Reports state that prior to his death, the 13th Dalai Lama instructed the Lhasa priests to go to a lake 100 miles from Lhasa where the "divine revelation" would be made. It is said the priests found two images; firstly, a picture of a place with "diverse races and heterogeneous dresses," and, secondly, the emergence of three Tibetan characters suggesting Taersu. Taersu is known as "Ethiopian Tibet" where the priests sent agents to Chinghai to search for the reincarnation.

The priests met the late Panchen Lama who gave instructions to proceed to Hungtaya, 16 miles from Haining, where they found the boy infant. Reports were sent to the Central Government and Lhasa and the boy was taken to the Taersu Lama's.

The Tibetan Commissioners believe that all Tibetans will support the new ruler as the reincarnation coincides with the revelations of his predecessor.

The 8th Dalai Lama, who enjoyed the widest temporal powers of all the Dalai Lamas, once predicted that the "14th Dalai Lama will surpass all in virtue and learning."

The theory of reincarnation governs the appointment of all the Lamas church offices, as different "incarnations" represent different manifestations of Buddha. The "Living Buddha" to the Lamas is a human vessel in which is deposited the divine attributes. When he dies the attribute continues, and a new vessel must be found for it. This is done by searching out a number of children who were born at the time of the death of the Dalai Lama and choosing one as the reincarnation.

The Mongolian Affairs Commission told the United Press that the Dalai Lama has not been finally selected as yet, because three candidates are still in line for the reincarnation. They said that a Commission will be sent from Chungking to Tibet to superintend the final selection.

Coolidge Is Rammed

Shanghai, July 20. The President Coolidge sailed at 7.10 a.m. to-day, half a day late, because the typhoon and rain delayed the moving of cargo.

The liner suffered slight damage amidships on the port side on her arrival at 1.40 p.m. yesterday when the Japanese freighter Nissan Maru, proceeding down the Whangpoo, rammed her, suffering damage to her bow. The steel plates of the President Coolidge were dented and two port holes damaged.—United Press.

The liner is due in Hongkong to-morrow.

Danzig, July 20. Danzig Nazis admit that there are 4,000 extra Nazi police in Danzig and that barracks for their accommodation are inadequate.

Twenty alleged members of Marxist organisations have been arrested. It is reported that weapons were found with them and that they held communication with foreign Powers.—Reuter Bulletin.

German Threat

Berlin, July 20. The Commander-in-Chief of the German Army, General von Brauchitsch, delivered a speech to-day at the Tannenberg National War Memorial in East Prussia, which he described as a reply to certain Polish claims.

The occasion of the speech was a visit to the tomb of Field Marshal von Hindenburg, victor of the Battle of Tannenberg against the Russians in 1914.

General von Brauchitsch said that Hindenburg knew what was at stake when he declared that it was above all things necessary to effectively and completely liberate this ancient Polish territory. He stressed that this constituted an appropriate answer to those who are now advancing claims to this ancient soil.

"We do not seek to fight, but much less do we fear it," he declared.

After recalling his own experience as General Officer Commanding the East Prussian district, the speaker reminded his audience of the words of Frederick the Great, "Either we must beat the enemy or we must be moved down by his batteries."

He said, "The General, no young German officer, worth his salt, was not animated by a burning desire to lead his troops one day to victory."—Trans-Ocean.

Visits Of Inspection

Warsaw, July 20. General Ironside is inspecting military establishments and attending a military parade to-day. He is lunching with the War Minister and will probably return to England by air to-morrow.—Reuter Bulletin.

British Arms Loan

London, July 19. Poland is reported to be complaining that Great Britain is demanding the right to dictate how Poland intends spending the £5,000,000 loan for military purposes.

Sir John Simon is said to be insisting that Poland must spend the money in the British Empire while Poland prefers to purchase part of the war materials in the United States where she can get quicker delivery.—United Press.

Poland Wants Gold

London, July 20. The Anglo-Polish credit negotiations in London have reached a difficult stage, arising from the fact that British stipulate that the credits granted by England should be spent exclusively in England, whereas Poland wants to use the credits to finance orders placed with other countries, notably the U.S.

As regards the amount of these credits, the negotiations now revolve, according to the Daily Telegraph, about the question of a British export credit for Polish armaments orders up to eight million pounds sterling, and for granting a Franco-British cash loan of 2.5 million pounds sterling, of which the British part should be five million pounds.

The Daily Telegraph adds that Poland wants to receive this cash credit in gold.—Trans-Ocean.

Collapse Of S'hai Dollar

Shanghai, July 20.

Chaotic conditions were experienced in the financial district to-day as the Chinese dollar resumed the downward trend and established a new low exchange value of 4 1/2d. Crowds of Chinese are reported to have formed a queue outside the headquarters of the Hua Hsing Commercial Bank in Hongkew endeavouring to get rid of their Chinese currency in exchange for Hua Hsing notes, which the Bank now claims is pegged to sterling at 6d.

While the holders of dollars rushed to buy foreign exchange, which was only available in limited quantities at the progressively worsening rates, others turned their cash into shares or commodities.

In the open market cash sellers at the opening offered sterling at 5d and United States dollars at 9 1/2 cents. The market ruled weak for the greater part of the day and at the close the respective rates were 4 1/2d and 8 1/2 cents, nominal, with sellers scarce and business virtually impossible.

Gold bars opened at $3,300, as compared with $3,200 at yesterday's close, and moved sharply higher throughout the day, closing at $3,955.

An active session was also experienced on the Stock Exchange where the closing prices were, however, mostly below yesterday's final levels due to profit-taking.

The yen in the "black market," which was still at par with the dollar yesterday, fetched 110 Chinese cents, this afternoon, following the renewed weakness of the dollar.—Reuter.

Japanese Views

Tokyo, July 20. All Japanese, clerical, concerned voice support for the severance of relations between the Hua Hsing Commercial currency and the Chungking dollar and the establishment of a new exchange standard for the new currency.

It is believed unlikely that Britain will continue support for the Chinese currency after the £10,000,000 stabilization fund has allegedly been exhausted in about three months.

A new level of six pence is also considered the most appropriate mark in view of the trade relations and tendencies of commodity prices and other peculiar circumstances in the Shanghai area.—Domei.

Seeks Foreign Co-operation

Tientsin, July 20. While the Yokohama Specie Bank is pressing against possible refusal by foreign banks to adhere to the new exchange concentration policy, German banks, including the Deutsche Asiatische Bank, have pledged co-operation with the Federal Reserve Bank.

Following the announcement of the extension of the port of commerce control to the entire line of commerce, the Deutsche Asiatische Bank has been preparing to open a new office in the First Special Administrative District, Japanese and Chinese authorities concerned are watching with concern the possible attitude of other foreign banks.

To avoid isolation, Chinese banks in the Concessions are offering co-operation in the new exchange policy. The Hopei Provincial Bank has already started removal to the Chinese quarter from the Concession. The Kheheng Banking Corporation on Wednesday opened a new account with the Yokohama Specie Bank.—Domei.

Ex-King Being Sued

Embezzlement Charged Against Prajadhipok

Singapore, July 20. The Malaya Tribune's Bangkok correspondent states that the Siamese Government has filed suit against ex-King Prajadhipok and his Queen, claiming 125,000,000 bahts, the value and interest on Crown properties they allegedly transferred without Government authorisation before their abdication.

The claim covers the alleged transfer, in 1935, of British Consols to the value of £2,000,000 purchased with the Privy Purses during the King's previous reign, and deposited with the Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation in London; sums deposited in the same Bank in London and allegedly transferred—one covering refund of British income tax; also deposits from Crown property in the National City Bank's New York Branch totalling U.S.$367,000.

It is further alleged that the ex-Rulers used Crown money to pay premiums on £17,000 worth of life assurance policies.

The Government is seeking authorisation to seize any of the ex-King's property in Siam pending settlement of the suit.—United Press.

King Prajadhipok abdicated in 1935 after a long quarrel with his government whom he charged with employing methods incompatible with the personal liberty of the subject. He has since lived with his wife at Billbenden, Kent, in England. In March this year the Siamese Government ceased to pay the annuity granted to the ex-King and they also withdrew other grants to members of the Royal family.

New Television Station

London, July 20. The Directors-General of the British Broadcasting Corporation stated to-day that a television broadcast station will be established at Birmingham.

Hitherto the only station has been London where television programmes have a range of 30 miles. The programmes have been clearly picked up by sets in the Channel Islands.

The question of a separate licence for television reception is now under consideration, the Director-General added.—Reuter Bulletin.

GERMAN ARMY

Two Million Under Arms In August

Berlin, July 20. The increasing military activity is leading observers to estimate that Germany will have approximately 2,000,000 under arms by the end of August.

The most recent class of reservists for three months' service have been called up in addition to an estimated 400,000 of the regular Army.

Meanwhile there is no indication that the 400,000 reservists who were called up in the spring, will be released yet.

Germany's standing army is estimated at 1,000,000 men.

The unusual military activity of recent weeks has been officially described as part of the manoeuvres. It includes, firstly, an unusual amount of troop movements throughout the Reich; secondly, the concentration of troops, estimated at three divisions, in Bohemia, Moravia and Slovakia; thirdly, the requisitioning of automobiles and the inspection of trucks as a preliminary to requisitioning; fourthly, the erection of earthworks eight miles from the Polish frontier in addition to the permanent fortifications 30 miles behind the frontier.—United Press.

Simla Conference

Simla, July 20. A comprehensive Simla to enable immediate institution of joint emergency measures is understood to have been drawn up in the defence talks between India and Burma which concluded to-day.

The two countries, although each is responsible for its own defence, have now established close liaison on many important aspects of military and air defence.

The preservation of sea communications, on which India and Burma are primarily dependent, is understood to have been discussed at the recent Singapore conference.

Plans for maintenance of food supplies and transport of war materials and military reinforcements are believed to have been discussed at Simla in the light of the Singapore decisions.

The object of the scheme is to ensure unbroken co-operation between the two countries over all essential matters under any conditions.—Reuter.

Swatow Conditions

Japanese To Protect Chinese Property

Swatow, July 20. The Japanese Expeditionary Force has issued a statement pledging protection of the property left by 2,500,000 overseas Chinese in Swatow and Chaochow.

The statement says that over a month has elapsed since the occupation of Swatow and peace and order have been fully restored in Swatow, Chaochow, Tenghai and Anpou. A new government to administer East Kwangtung by absorbing the peace and defence commissions at different places will shortly be established.

Swift action prevented the Chinese troops from carrying out their "cleansing" operations, and most of the important Government offices and private property in the districts are well preserved.

The Maritime Customs at Swatow was taken over by the Japanese on July 5; the water service was resumed on July 17; the Bank of Taiwan opened a branch on July 16; and the electric light service will be resumed at the end of this month.

While the Japanese are satisfied at the attitude of the Chinese citizens in the Swatow-Chaochow area, who promptly effected co-operation in rehabilitating the districts, the statement urges the overseas Chinese themselves from anti-Japanese and Communist influences, and support the efforts to construct a new China.

If however, they stick to anti-Japanese tendencies and continue to support the Chinese Kai-shih regime, the statement warns the overseas Chinese that relentless reprisals are forthcoming.—Domei.

Tokyo Talks

HOPES OF SUCCESS VERY DIM

Both Sides Stand Firm

Tokyo, July 20. It is authoritatively understood that no agreement has been reached for the proposed settlement of the Anglo-Japanese dispute in Tientsin on the result of the conversations on Wednesday.

Informal quarters understand that the British Ambassador will cable to London for fresh instructions before he resumes the talks on Friday.

The British envoy, during Wednesday's conversations, maintained the British Government's readiness to co-operate for an amicable settlement of the dispute but maintained the independent claims of the British Government in formulating basic conditions of a possible settlement.

Mr. Arlita reiterated the Japanese Government's views that the Japanese proposals are based on the actual conditions obtaining "on the spot" and urged Britain to recognize the existence of a state of war in reality and to effect co-operation with the Japanese in regulating the political, economic and other affairs indispensable for the subsistence of the Japanese military forces in Tientsin.

With the claims of both sides having been sufficiently outlined during the course of the past conversations, the course of the negotiations hereafter will be conducted on the basis of these claims. It is understood that the conference will be continued in the form of free talking.—Domei.

Firm Japanese Stand

Tokyo, July 20. It is understood that agreement was reached to-day between Baron Hironuma and the Foreign Minister, Mr. Machibara Arlita, to maintain a firm stand in the Anglo-Japanese negotiations regarding the Tientsin issue.

Detailed reports on the outcome of Wednesday's conversations were made by Mr. Arlita to Baron Hironuma and at a conference at the Foreign Ministry.

As the result of to-day's consultations among Government leaders, it was understood to have been affirmed that Japan would be unable to make concessions in her claims for the recognition of a virtual state of war in China and the necessary measures in political, economic and other fields for the subsistence of the Japanese Army "on the spot."

Competent observers believe that even if Britain shows a conciliatory attitude on other points, Japan will probably suspend negotiations in case Britain fails to agree to the basic Japanese principles. In such an eventuality Japan will attribute the failure of the parley to Britain's insufficient understanding.—Domei.

Special Emissary

Tokyo, July 20. Mr. W. D. Allan, Secretary of the British Embassy in China, arrived at Tokyo on July 16 as a special emissary of Sir Archibald Clark Kerr, the British Ambassador to China, to assist Sir Robert Craigie, the British Ambassador to Japan, in the diplomatic negotiations on the Tientsin issue.—Domei.

Pessimism Increases

Tokyo, July 20. It is understood that the British had previously agreed to a general declaration of wartime necessities, under which the Japanese Army is operating in China. However, continued Japanese insistence on abstract principles has aroused apprehension that the Japanese attach interpretation to this which the British did not intend.

That apprehension is related to precedents in which the Japanese have utilised a broad definition by shifting interpretations in accordance with the moments of their requirements.

The British are ready to discuss the Tientsin questions in a conciliatory tone. However diplomats following the negotiations think the conversations might never reach the definite problems.

It is understood that Sir Robert Craigie is pessimistic and the British are already looking beyond the negotiations and considering next moves, including the possibility of Tientsin evacuation.—United Press.

Breakdown Foreseen

Tokyo, July 20. It is learned in diplomatic circles that a breakdown is threatening in the Anglo-Japanese conversations, because of Japanese insistence on an agreement upon abstract general principles before discussing particulars about North China.

Mr. Arlita, Japanese Foreign Minister, who occasionally yesterday left the room to consult with army representatives, insisted on Britain admitting her neutrality attitude as regards pledges to China and that she would co-operate with Japan henceforth.

Sir Robert Craigie's instructions do not permit this, for which reason unless changes come from the other side, continuation of the conversations would be fruitless.—United Press.

JAMES BRUEN CRACKS UP IN IRISH GOLF "OPEN"

TAKES 75 & 81 IN LAST ROUNDS TO FINISH 6TH Consistency Wins Title For Lees Of Yorkshire

County Down, July 20.

A. Lees, with rounds of 69, 72, 74 and 72, aggregating 287, won the Irish Open Golf Championship to-day.

Ronald Whitcombe, last year's British Open Champion, had rounds of 70, 69, 72 and 72, aggregating 283, which put him in second place; while A. D. Locke, the young South African professional and holder of the Irish Open title, had 72, 74, 72 and 72, totalling 290. Locke was third.

To-day, G. White, of Notts Club, went round in 72 and 74, and as his earlier two rounds were 69 and 70, he thus aggregated 292.

A Daly, of Derry, had cards of 77 and 74 to-day. His first two rounds totalled 71 and 72, his aggregate thus being 294.

James Bruen, the young Irish player, who led in the first two rounds, cracked up badly to-day, taking 75 and 81. His first two rounds were negotiated in 68 and 74, giving him an aggregate of 290.

P. J. Mahon, of Royal Dublin, who had 68 and 70 in the first two rounds, also cracked up in to-day's final two holes, taking 75 and 80 to aggregate 299.—Reuter.

Brilliant Match At Hurlingham

Jaguars Beat Ghosts In Champion Cup

By R. Sheepshanks

London, June 26.
The Jaguars won the Champion Cup at Hurlingham, beating the Ghosts by 5 goals to 5. The game was the best of the season, and a fitting wind up to a most successful tournament, in which every game but one was a thoroughly good one and which showed us that we could produce from players not in the country a team which would have to ask America for a 10-goal start.

It was fought out at top speed from start to finish, and the only players in their best form and combining excellently; the result was in doubt until the final bell, and it was not until the last period that the winners took the lead.

The outstanding players were Guinness, Hinde and Butler. Guinness is a mainstay in any company, and he proved himself such on this occasion.

He was pinned down to defence for almost all the game, and the only point he gave away was a cross which cost his side a goal; his defensive hitting was perfect, and he took the only two attacking chances that were given him to score brilliantly on each occasion.

FINE CAPTAINCY

Hinde's captaincy and individual play were equally good. He was always in position to cover his back and play to his forwards, and his strokes were always made with perfect accuracy from all positions.

Butler played the ideal No. 1 game. He was a thorn in the side of the opposing back throughout, always being in position either to ride him or to slip him, and it was his play that imposed defensive tactics on Guinness.

If he devotes himself to specialising as a No. 1 we shall not need to go to Australia for some one to occupy that position in our next international side.

GOAL IN FEW SECONDS

The game opened with a goal to Rous, scored from the throw-in in the first few seconds. Fast and level play followed, the Ghosts equalising with a combined attack started by Hinde and finished off by Butler.

The second period was hard and even, but the Jaguars were missing their scoring chances and the Ghosts were not, the latter going to 3-1 with goals by Hinde and Lindsay.

Rous and Hamilton Russell scored good goals in the third, the former getting well on to a long approach shot from Guinness and the latter backing up a forward rush to score from 50 yards.

Guinness then crossed badly to concede a 40-yard penalty, from which Douglas Scott put through. Guinness equalised from a penalty hit in the fourth, but Hinde cut

British Champion Gives Lessons

Sale, Cheshire, July 11.

The other day Richard Burton, golf pro at Sale, Cheshire, beat off all opposition from Britain, America, Australia and South Africa, and won the British Open Golf Championship.

There were times when Walter Hagen and other American competitors estimated that winning the championship was worth £20,000 to them.

But Burton is back at his club giving lessons at 2/6d, a half-an-hour and is quite happy about it.

He hasn't a contract with the club and now that he has the title of Open Champion there are lots of clubs who would like to snap him up.

But Burton says: "I'm very happy here and I have no intention of leaving."—United Press.

SENSATION IN BOXING CIRCLES

British B.B.C. Resigns From World Committee

New York, July 19.
A sensation has been caused in international boxing circles by the resignation of the British Boxing Board of Control from the World Professional Boxing Championship Committee.

This move comes in the wake of the Len Harvey-Jack McAvoy light-heavyweight fight held in London recently, which the World Committee unanimously rejected as a world title bout although it was advertised as such.

Billy Conn, who recently beat Mello Bettina in a light-heavyweight bout billed for the world's title, is recognised by the American Boxing Association and the New York State Athletic Commission as the rightful holder of the title.—United Press.

Len Harvey was originally matched with John Henry Lewis, recognised by the World Committee, as holder, but a week before the fight was scheduled to take place in London, the British Boxing Board of Control refused permission for the fight to take place as the Negro holder failed to pass a medical examination, being partially blind in one eye as a result of his terrific beating at the hands of Joe Louis, who Lewis met in an unofficial world heavyweight title bout.

Harvey, who held the British and Empire heavyweight titles, and who was at the time of his proposed bout with Lewis recognised by the American governing bodies as first contender for the title, was then matched with Jack McAvoy, the bout receiving the official blessing of the British Boxing Board of Control, who recognised it as a world title bout.

through from half-way and scored with a beautiful long near-side shot. Guinness again equalised in the fifth with an 80-yard drive, and then a very fine ride off by Butler should have given a goal to Lindsay, but the shot was wide.

Play in the final period was harder than ever. Guinness came right through the game from halfway. His approach shot was wide but he corrected it by scoring with a fine backhand from a very difficult angle.

Jaguars: Capt. N. Dugdale, Hon. W. K. Rous, Hon. J. Hamilton Russell, Capt. K. Guinness.
Ghosts: Capt. W. F. Butler, Capt. M. J. Lindsay, Major W. R. Hinde, J. H. Douglas Scott.

TOUGH AND GO.—It was a close shave for the Chinese Baseball Club player as he made a leap for the sack in the match played last Sunday between the Chinese B.C. and the Union Brewers. The latter, who are virtually assured of the championship, won by 10-2.—Staff Photographer.

Here And There With "Abe" Rugby Relations To Be Resumed Next Easter

ACCORDING to a Reuter cable, published yesterday, the first game between the French Rugby Federation and British clubs since relations were broken off in 1931 will be played next year against Wales on Easter Monday in Paris. Therein lies a story. The International Rugby Tournament in Britain was not always quite the insular matter that it is now. The National Fifteen of France used to participate as well. But in France the game went off along what the British authorities felt to be the wrong lines, and eight years ago and contacts between the British and French sides was forbidden until such time as the Frenchmen should be considered to have put their house in order. Most rugby folk in Britain were anxious to have French players participating once again because the French, beginning in the role of learners, developed so impressively that, before their exit, they had succeeded in defeating all four of the countries that have taught them the game. Recently the International Rugby Football Board, comprising representatives of English, Scottish, Irish and Welsh Unions, sent a letter to the French Federation and outlined the terms upon which the British authority felt that playing relations could be resumed.

The Trouble

THESE terms related, in the main, to the condition of Rugby affairs in France, which eight years ago were so unsatisfactory from the British viewpoint, that the "heads" in England felt impelled to prohibit matches between one and all, and particularly by the French, who recognised frankly, however, that the game in their country had departed quite considerably from the traditions of rigid amateurism and restraint so greatly cherished by the Rugby Union folk in Britain. Held to be the root of some of this trouble was the fact that France had developed an inter-club championship which tends rather to overheat the atmosphere of competition. In their recent letter to the French Federation, the British administrators recommended that this tournament be dispensed with. In England there is no such thing. And no desire for any such thing. As the essence of amateur Rugby, under Rugby Union laws, is the playing of the game merely for the game's sake.

Agreement Reached

THESE matters have been thrashed out and an understanding has now been reached. Relations between the two countries, therefore, can now resume. In the main, Rugby football in Britain is just a matter of "friendly" inter-club matches. The results of these have no bearing on one another, there is no striving for League points or silver medals, and the general quality of sportsmanship remains very high. In an extremely strenuous, hard-knocking game where, for obvious reasons, it is possible for it to sink decidedly low if teams become careless of proper traditions in a desire for victory.

"Charging" Rule

SOME of you, who follow soccer closely, probably read in yesterday's Telegraph of the amendment to the "Charging" Rule which caused such a great deal of bother both in Britain and Hongkong last year. Do you remember that famous foot-note to Law 12 (Section E)? In case you don't, here it is: "N.B.—

This law is not intended to penalise ALL charging; it is permissible as long as, in the opinion of the referee, it is fair and the players concerned are attempting to play the ball." That didn't do at all. You may remember that there was a great deal of confusion here and at Home. Scottish referees awarded penalties when backs charged forwards and ignored the ball, while some English referees didn't. In Hongkong, referees seemed to be uncertain as to what steps to take until they got together and wisely decided to take uniform action. In some places, rather, than have any trouble referees and players alike practically ignored the instruction. Something has now been done to clarify the rule. At the end of the footnote is added the following, "and the ball is within playing distance." Some writers think that even this is too elastic. Which is quite true, because referees may have difficulty in defining "within playing distance."

Softball Visit

HONGKONG has good reason to remember the bunch of American girls who visited Hongkong last year and made softball so popular. News has just been received that we may see them—or maybe another team—again in September or October. Mr. Marty Fiedler, who brought the American team to Manila last year, has received advice that there may be another invasion of the Philippines by these American beauties. If this visit comes about, we may see the girls in Hongkong again.

Young Aguinaldo

FROM Manila also comes information that Young Aguinaldo, the Filipino heavyweight wrestler whom Jose Corles took to the United States last year, is going over great on the Pacific Coast and is proving to be a great attraction wherever he appears. Young Aguinaldo may be remembered in Hongkong by those who had an interest in wrestling three or four years ago. At that time we had a bunch of wrestlers amongst us, Wong Bock-cheung, Harbans Singh, Young Aguinaldo being a few of them, and an attempt was made to popularise the "sport" in the Colony. A few bouts were arranged, but it never really caught on. However, these giants of the mat had a better time in Shanghai and Singapore.

Hayward Passes

TN yesterday's obituary notice of Tom Hayward, it was not mentioned that one of his records has stood for 32 years, and this being his record aggregate of 3,518 runs for the 1906 season, which has not yet been surpassed. In an age when the bat has established such a great ascendancy over the ball, it is rather gratifying that this record at least stands to the credit of a batsman who lived at a time when the skillful bowler was not robbed of his just deserts by "doped" wickets and the like.

CYCLING PRACTICE

Cyclists intending to participate in the All-Hongkong Cycling Meeting to be held at Cattell Hill on August 5 and 6, are notified that permission has been granted by South China Athletic Association for practice sprints to commence as from this evening.

Semi-Final Water-Polo Matches

Two semi-final round matches in the Hongkong Volunteer Defence Corps Water-polo event (part of the Corps Swimming Gala which takes place on July 28) were held in the Victoria Recreation Club swimming pool yesterday when the Portuguese Company eliminated the Mobile Machine Guns 3 goals to 2, and Static Machine Guns beat Corps Artillery 5 goals to 1.

In the opening match of the evening Portuguese Coy. were fortunate to beat the Mobiles by the odd goal, although the losers had only themselves to blame. Mobiles' defence was weak in their clearances and this paved the way for at least two of the Portuguese goals. G. H. Fowler was the most dangerous of the Mobiles forward and opened their account, but De Sa equalised with a back-hander. In the second half L. M. Remedios scored two more goals for the Portuguese and H. L. Remedios reduced the arrears with a late effort.

Outstanding feature of the game was the brilliant goal-keeping of Sydney Fowler, who played magnificently to keep the score down. Portuguese Cy.: M. M. de V. Soares; L. A. Soares and C. N. de Silva; L. M. Remedios; H. de Sa, J. D. Remedios and C. Silva-Netto.

Mobile M.G.: S. A. Fowler; D. H. Stewart and H. L. Ozerio; D. Hutchinson, L. Ozerio, A. M. Rodriguez and G. H. Fowler.

Statics Too Good

In the second game of the evening, Static Machine Guns completely outclassed the Corps Artillery. Outstanding feature of this fast and very clean game was brilliant passing by the winners.

Harold Winglee was the pick of the winners with S. Lee and E. Zimmern rendering good work in attack and defence respectively. Hussain was best among the losers, but wasted too many efforts by long range attempts to score.

H. Winglee, S. Lee (2) opened the scoring in the first half and in the second further goals were added for the winners by T. Kew (2). Young Yuk-wa scored Corps Artillery's only goal.

Static M.G.: S. H. Choo; E. Zimmern and H. Winglee; W. Sprinkle; T. Kew, S. Lee and E. Lammer; Corps Artillery: Kwok Mok-hoi; P. Wilson and A. Ismail; A. J. Hussain, Young Yuk-wa, S. Bux and Leung Tse-wai.

Bobby Riggs Wins Dull Wimbledon Final Over A Tired Elwood Cooke

By Ulyss Rogers

London, July 8.

The two young Californians who have come all the way to Wimbledon, to settle their differences on the Centre Court, for the championship, produced nothing like the fireworks or thrills to which we are accustomed on final day.

After two hours and ten minutes Bobby Riggs, U.S.A. No. 1, became the champion, beating U.S.A.'s No. 7, Elwood T. Cooke, 2-0, 6-0, 3-0, 6-0, 6-2.

It was the least dramatic men's final performance for many years. After four sets of classical tennis, measured exercises, in which the players scored close acquaintance with each other, Riggs suddenly took compassion on the old gentlemen nodding in the sunshine, and did his best to put variety into it.

Riggs had evidently been saving his wind. He pushed his reserve of strength into one final effort to secure the title and the two big challenge cups, the £20 silver pot for keeps and the gold medal.

COOKE TIRED

Cooke, in fact, was exhausted, and was slowly rushed out of it by a long-distance runner who had just enough sprint left in him. This was the thirteenth time Riggs had played and beaten Cooke.

After the match Cooke, exhausted, lay in the dressing-room with wet bandages on his head, and having message, he had fallen during the match and suffered a little cramp in his hands.

As a lesson in stroke-making, playing an opponent the match passed muster. But for ten minutes of Budge or Perry!

Perhaps this is the new American, and the big thump and sensational wallop have passed.

RAGGED MATCH

Before this match we had seen the downfall of Kay Stammers and Mrs. Hamersley to Alice Marble and Mrs. Fabjan, score 6-0, 6-3.

The American pair were the better combination, and deserved to win a rather ragged match. On Court 1 Jean Nicoll, failing to get equal support from Betty Nuttall, whose volleying was unreliable at the critical stage near the end of the third set, went down in the double match against Helen Jacobs and Billie Yorke by 7-5, 4-6, 9-11.

Billie mixed her game with brains, and was excellent in attack and defence. Betty and Jean were down at 2-3 in the third set, but they levelled at 5-5 and stuck to the enemy till 9-0.

GERMANS WIN IN THEIR OWN TENNIS TOURNEY Foreign Players Eliminated

Hamburg, July 20.
The finals in the German Tennis Championships, which are going on in this city, will be played exclusively by German netmen, all foreign competitors having been eliminated.

Nolf Goepfert, Roderich Menzel, Engelbert Koch and Henner Henkel have arrived at the semi-final stage of the singles.

After Goepfert had scored a surprising victory over the title-holder, Siegfried Hunsberger, Koch defeated Karl Schroeder, of Sweden, by 6-3, 6-7, 2-6, 6-1, 6-2. Henkel eliminated Ferenczy, of Hungary, by 6-8, 6-3, 6-7, 6-1, 6-4, and Menzel beat Canapele of Italy, by 4-6, 6-0, 3-6, 6-3, 6-1.

In the women's singles, Madame Helde Sperling, of Denmark, Mlle. Samoyli, of Hungary, Mlle. Kovacs of Yugoslavia, and Miss Rollin Courquerre, of Holland, have arrived at the semi-final stage.—Trans-Ocean.

Bowls Semi-Finals Postponed

The semi-final in the rinks lawn bowls championship between those skipped by J. C. Brown and J. C. S. Fender has been postponed as Brown's Kowloon Dock players are unable to secure relief from work. The match will probably be played next Thursday on the Craigie-gower green.

Five matches in the first round of the singles championship scheduled to take place yesterday were also postponed as overnight rain resulted in sodden greens. These will be played next week on the same greens.

NEW MEN'S EPEE CHAMPION

Beddard Wins After Fight-Off

By M. Pollock Smith

London, June 26.
The last of this season's A.F.A. championships, the men's epee, was won at Wandsworth by T. E. Beddard (Lansdowne), after beating M. D. McCready (Lansdowne) 2-0, in the fight-off for the title.

The final consisted of three from Lansdowne, two each from Grosvenor and Leinster F.C. and one each from the Polytechnic, Salle Bertrand, and Salle Paul. Three ex-champions were in the final, Childs, Pelling and Nolley; also an international winner, Beddard, and last year's national runner-up, Paul.

Nolley finished 3 up, and everything rested on the last three fights. Winton, already 5 wins, stood a chance of being top if he beat Paul in his final duel, but he lost a good match.

In the fight-off Beddard, the more seasoned competitor, won 2-0, his deciding hit being a cleverly timed fleche to become the new champion. Winton finished third over Nolley by one hit on the aggregate, a fine effort for a young duellist straight from the junior event. Scores: T. E. Beddard (Lansdowne), 7 wins; M. D. McCready (Lansdowne), 6 wins; W. Winton (Bertrand), 6, 11 hits received; Major C. B. Nolley (Lansdowne), 5, 12 hits; Dr. G. Stany (L.F.C.), 4; J. Childs (Grosvenor), 3, 15 hits and 15 scored; J. Childs (Grosvenor), 2, 15 hits and 15 scored; R. Hamersley (Bertrand), 2, 15 hits; R. Paul (Paul), 2; J. Creek (Polytechnic), 1.

Beddard vs. McCready 2-0 in fight-off.

A Brilliant Display Against Mrs. Fabyan: Miss Marble's Triumph

London, July 7.

After a match which began at 2 o'clock and finished nearly four and a half hours later, England gained a place in the Wimbledon finals yesterday. Miss Kathleen Stammers defeated Mrs. Palfrey Fabyan, of America, by 7-5, 2-6, 6-3 in a contest which was interrupted four times by rain.

The actual playing time was an hour and a quarter. The fourth interruption lasted 2 hours and 10 minutes, and few thought play would be resumed at all. Even the officials had almost despaired of further play, and they would probably have sent round the "No more play to-day" notices at 6 o'clock. But a few minutes before that hour the drizzle stopped.

At once the tarpaulin covers were removed from the court and not only was this match finished, but Miss Alice Marble, of America, joined Miss Stammers in the final by one of the quickest victories ever recorded at Wimbledon. She beat Mrs. Sperling, of Denmark, 6-0, 6-0 in 19 minutes.

How far the interruptions affected the tense first battle it is difficult to say. The points at which they arrived suggest that they had no adverse results for Mrs. Fabyan. She was 1-4 down in the first set when the first stoppage came. She won the next game after resuming, and pulled up from 2-5 to 4-5 before yielding the set.

The next delay came at 1-love to Mrs. Fabyan and deuce. She won the next two points to be 2-0 before the players had again to run to shelter.

Mrs. Fabyan proceeded to 4-love and to 5-2 before the long wait, braved by many more than half the 15,000 crowd present, was enforced on pent-up players who, long before it was up, must have debated whether they would ask to be allowed to begin all over again or resume on the morrow at the critical stage at which they had left off.

WINNER BETTER THAN EVER

One clear impression remained from the painfully drawn out encounter. Such fiery tennis deserved to be sunlit, and that the thread had thus to be broken will be regretted by all who saw this lively display of women's lawn tennis.

Miss Stammers was at the top of her form. I would say that at times she touched greater heights than ever before.

Her forehand drive, the most powerful weapon in her armoury, worked almost to perfection. With it she raked the corners of the American's court, clipped the side-lines with deeply angled cross-court shots, and occasionally found the narrow opening for the pass when Mrs. Fabyan was in her favourite volleying position.

To do that was an achievement. Mrs. Fabyan showed that she is not only the nearest and nimblest fore-court player of all women, but her anticipation of Miss Stammers' counter thrusts was at times uncanny. It was, therefore, to a large extent, the English forehand against the piercing American volleys, though Miss Stammers may also claim a service superiority.

DEFENCE V. POWER

Mrs. Fabyan could not, of course, keep up a non-stop volleying attack. For many rallies she was compelled to stay back, pitting her skilful defence and fleetness of foot against the pace and power of that raking forehand drive. Her strategic use of the lob, not only in moments of stress, but also as a means to turn the point of attack, was excellent.

Some of the rallies were entrancing, and each interruption seemed like taking a succulent sweet out of a small boy's mouth just when he was enjoying the full measure of it.

Though Miss Stammers secured a 4-love lead in the first set, the games were by no means easily come by. Mrs. Fabyan was within a point of the second, had 5 game points in the third, and another for the fourth. What could be closer than that?

She checked the unhappy sequence by holding her third service game in the rain, and after a quarter of an hour's delay captured Miss Stammers for 2-4. The English girl's reply to this was to increase the pace

Bowls Singles Ties For To-day

If greens are in a fit condition for play, the following matches will be decided in the first round of the Open Bowls Singles Championship of the Colony this afternoon:

At Kowloon C.C.—G. C. Moss v. A. Eastman.

At Kowloon F.C.—J. S. Riddell v. H. Gilling; J. N. Wong v. J. A. Lee; A. Taitoo v. C. R. Basu; V. M. R. Fraser; J. E. Noronha v. F. E. Channing.

of her drives. A manlike overhead kill helped in the capture of Mrs. Fabyan's service game for 5-2 and then the battle was at its hottest.

STROKE OF LUCK

Mrs. Fabyan punished some weak second services, and surged up to the net on her own service. So excellent was her anticipation that her racket seemed as a magnet to the ball, and although she moved swiftly about the court she never appeared to have to hurry.

She drew level at 5-all, and if a net-cord stroke, one of many that her top-spin forehand luckily gathered, had not come to Miss Stammers' aid in the next game, she might not have won the set. But Miss Stammers' reprisal was a worthy one. The forehand was again the predominant stroke in some fine driving bouts, and England was soon a set up.

It was now Mrs. Fabyan's turn, between showers, to reach 4-love. Though she began the set with two double faults, the tennis was even better, the rallies even keener, and the games still wavering around deuce. Miss Stammers won two long deuce and 'warped' games, and then Mrs. Fabyan went out.

But the rain was now falling heavily, and, with the match all square, the dismal tarpaulins were again drawn over the court, this time for more than two hours.

BRIGHT LAST SET

It might have been thought that the long wait would attack the players' nerves, but the third set was probably the best of all. Certainly it was Miss Stammers' best. She won the first two games, held a very close one on her service, and then secured the advantage at 3-1, and then succumbed to some brilliant American volleying, and equally brilliant passing strokes when Miss Stammers herself tried to force home a net attack.

So it was 3-all, but it was Mrs. Fabyan's last thrust. Miss Stammers went out triumphantly from the point, losing only four more points, and a still larger crowd cheered lustily enough for the full house that had watched the earlier chapters and then went home in despair.

LIGHTNING VICTORY

Miss Marble's lightning victory was astonishing. Mrs. Sperling could win only 9 points in the first set and 5 in the second.

The Danish woman's first service was contemptuously crashed to glory. It was the threatening gesture. The American, with sweeping drives of tremendous pace and power to the far corners of the court, scarcely met a counter after that from a player reputed to be one of the stoutest and fleetest retrievers in the game.

Mrs. Sperling was rendered completely helpless against the storm of drives and volleys that were rained on her. She was never allowed to get into her stride. It should be a great final between Miss Marble and Miss Stammers to-morrow.

The meeting was virtually saved from a continuation into the third week by squeezing the men's doubles semi-final before dark. Cooke and Riggs in partnership reached another final at the expense of the great French veterans, Borotra and Brugnon, whom they beat 6-1, 3-6, 6-2, 6-3.

One imagines that the slight dampness of the surface and one heavy fall affected Borotra, who still feels the knee injury he received in a ski-ing accident last winter. However that may be, he was at a discount against the quick-fire American volleys.

There must be an Anglo-American final in this event. C. E. Hare and F. H. D. Wilde, the British Davis Cup pair, won a fourth round match against the Yugoslavians, Puncce and Mitic, 6-1, 6-1, 7-5, and they meet another home pair, J. S. Olliv and R. A. Shays in the semi-final to-day.

Grace Allen, featured with Warren William, Ellen Drew, Kent Taylor and Judith Barrett in S.S. Van Dine's "The Grace Allen Murder Case," Paramount's comedy-mystery, now showing at the Queen's and Alhambra Theatres, turns detective and even amazes herself with her insane deductions.

Latest Beach Wear

For Seascapades

RAIN or shine, our beaches won't want for colour this summer. Every bathing girl can have all the colours of the spectrum in her swim suit, and what could be more exhilarating than gorgeous tropical colouring as a change from the trim, prim office clothes in dark colours that Miss X and Miss Y wear most of the year round for daily-breading.

We advise them to indulge in all the colour they can on holiday, for colour should be as much a part of the summer change as sea breezes and sunshine—it accentuates the contrast from the daily round.

So this year, instead of conventional navy and white, black and red, and so on, choose a suit that will give some South Sea Island glamour, full of coral reds, azure blues, palm greens and sun-glow yellows.

These all-wool "bathers" have been printed by quite a new process, so that a very wide range of colours can be used, and they are absolutely fast to sea and sun.

First comes a suit with green ground floral patterned in coral pink, blue, yellow and white. It's made with a latex bust line and front skirt. The latex bust line is flattering to the figure, as well as giving fit and comfort.

Next suit is printed with all the under-the-sea glories of a tropical island? There are seaweeds of many colours, and fish of a dozen shades and shapes. This also has the latex bust line and back and a front skirt.

The cross-over brassiere top is specially attractive on the third bath. This is in white, with an all-over design of colourful galleons, and elastic at bust line, back and legs makes for perfect fit.

Last, and gayest of all, is a suit with coral ground patterned in palm trees, South Sea maidens, flowers and birds, in dazzling array. The white wool-ribbon shoulder straps are adjustable, the wool-ribbon being slotted through to tie in a bow in front.

It also has elastic at the bust line and a front skirt.

The little line sketches show you just what the back of each of these pure wool Wolsley suits looks like. They're grand both for sun and sea bathing.

These Tennis Parties

THERE is a singular belief inherent in most hostesses that they have only to get their husbands to trace wavering white lines upon the lawn, erect a net, buy a dozen tennis balls, and command the first dozen people who come to her mind to "come over for tea and tennis," in order to ensure the most successful kind of social and sporting afternoon.

Personally, I dislike tennis parties, although, like the majority of us, from that very first afternoon when I respond to the wretched, "Do come, we're having a few people about for tennis on Saturday," I continue to rally to the call without a smile on my face. And yet, how absurdly funny it all is.

You accept you don your clean flannel, take your car, and arrive to find the traditional scene. There is the net, slightly sagging and calling for that solemn business with two racquets; there is the non-playing hostess sitting under a tree with her supposedly non-playing husband, who intends to be in on every possible set.

There, too, are your fellow-partners in the role—big tigers (craggy-looking fellows—often important blazers), the tigresses (brown, sinewy ladies with rolled socks, unpowdered noses, and a couple of racquets), the nondescript like oneself (a job lot of men and girls in white), and the rabbits, terror-stricken youths and maidens with occasional racquets and an appalling consciousness of the hungry tigers and their mates nearby.

Spin Racquets

For a while the talk is general, and then the host says, "Well, what about starting?" Everyone starts edging away from the court deprecatingly, at the same time intent upon being in the first set. Then, after everyone has said "No fear, not the first set for me," racquets are spun and four players find themselves facing one another with twitching smiles. Then the chorus begins by the first to say, "Well, how'll we play? I'll tell you frankly, this is my first game this year."

Racquets are spun again for partners, and again to decide about ends, and the attacking pair thrust balls at each other imploringly, with "You serve first," and "No, really, you do, please," and the tennis party opens according to ritual with a majestic double fault.

The set wears away, and the players shift one another, and the host fetches balls from flower-bed and road, and the other guests listen politely to their hostess and gnaw their nails as the vintage set of twelve games potters to 15-14, 15 all, 15-15, and on.

But at last it is over, and again nobody wishes to play, and all cry earnestly, "I'll sit this one out," and racquets are twirled, and another set begins, and the host, still out of it, goes on fetching stray balls, and the whole thing is over in about five minutes, a delectable tiger and tigress having been opposed to two perfectly honest rabbits who were just as bad as they said they were, and who wander dazedly off the court.

Then the hostess says, "Now, who hasn't played? You haven't, Miss Sims, and you haven't, Mr. Crane, but everyone else has." At once bashfulness sets in again and reluctance to be favoured. But the tigers of the last set are selected, since the set was so short, and the same thing happens again, and everyone is under the trees in five minutes, feeling that the first lot, whose turn it is to play again, are having very much the best of it, having run their opening set to 34 games.

They do play again and keep it up till tea time, having now learned the crafty tricks which keep a set going. Then, when tea is over (a draughtily business under the tree), the inevitable happens and the host, itching to be at it, cries, "Now, what about a men's four, eh?" The ladies settle into their chairs. The high spot of the day has arrived. The gods are at their frolics. A men's four!

And the men, however bad they may be, are conscious of what is expected of them, and with stern gusto they proceed to slush, lunge, jump, crouch, strut, slam, drive, and dash the perspiration from their brows all to no great purpose beyond that of causing the odd rabbit out to take up a position in the road with a landing net for fishing balls out of the stream.

Then it is over, and everyone starts having return matches, and it is recalled that the women haven't had a four, and they have one, and more return matches are played, and a freshly assorted men's four gets going.

Twilight falling finds the finale to all tennis parties in progress—a dashing single between the two worst rabbits, who, taking the opportunity afforded by everyone putting themselves into hats and coats and cars, grow quite boisterous and uplisp in their confidence.

And the hostess says, "Well, it has been nice, and all. You must come again." And, oddly enough, we do!

Sewing Aids

A FEW items, not generally found in work baskets, may be usefully included. For sharpening scissors, a square of emery paper is ideal. A nail file, is useful for tucking under small seams on thin materials. The ordinary darning mushroom is too big for children's socks and other small items. A large empty cotton reel serves the purpose well.

At the bottom of the basket keep a small tin of talcum powder. A little sprinkled on the fingers now and then, particularly when sewing out-of-doors, in hot weather, prevents them from becoming sticky. In a prominent position near the top of the basket keep a magnet. There is no quicker way of recovering lost needles and pins than by pushing it round the basket or over the floor.

Iced Coffee

A DELICIOUS hot-weather drink is iced coffee. This can be made with the least trouble simply by taking a small tin of coffee and adding a small tin of cold water according to the directions. Pour the diluted coffee into a cocktail shaker or large stoppered jar and shake with one or two spoonfuls of vanilla ice-cream until frothy.

Pour into tall glasses, add a dab of whipped cream if liked, and serve. If it is not required at once, keep the mixture in a refrigerator or ice-box. Add the cream just before serving.

Hot Weather Hints

ON hot, sticky evenings, don't take a cold bath. It will only make you hotter. Take a tepid one just before you go to bed, and then put some eau de Cologne over your entire body. Use a fresh-smelling variety of bath salts or bath essence.

During the daytime, lighten your make-up. A good idea is to dilute your usual liquid foundation with a little skin tonic, so that your face is prevented from becoming too greasy.

Give the feet a cooling treatment. Rub iced astringent on the heels and arches, and spare a little time to massage them before you retire at night—it is well worth it.

Don't try putting new make-up over old—it invariably clogs the skin.

Anne Brook

Skilful Mending

IT is annoying when a favourite pair of stockings suddenly springs a ladder, or a large hole, or when a well-liked dress or coat gets torn, for the repair is generally obvious, unless we are very careful about it.

Here are several ways in which mending may be almost invisible. A small ladder is less noticeable when a very small piece is torn when the wrong side, then the laddered part cut away as closely as possible to the stitching. On the right side it looks like a flaw, which is less obvious than a ladder—or we hope so!

Always use a very fine needle and mending-silk that matches perfectly, and trim with a sharp pair of embroidery scissors, being careful not to cut the stitches, or another ladder will start.

Holes in the heels and toes may be patched if you always keep handy a few old stockings of various shades, and use them to cut patches slightly larger than the hole to be mended.

Trim the ragged edges of the hole. Place the patch under the hole, and run-stitch it all round, about one-eighth of an inch from the edge, making the smallest possible stitches on the right side, and, of course, using matching silk. Run-stitch again round the extreme edge of the hole, or slip-stitch the edge to the patch, using very small stitches.

You will find this method much neater and more durable than a darn.

Stockings that have shrunk in the foot in the wash can have a new toe piece added in the same way.

Tears in Clothes

Jagged tears in clothes can be mended practically invisibly in this way:—Turn the garment inside out and lay flat on the ironing table, with the damaged part uppermost. Carefully draw the edges together so that the broken ends of the threads come together, but do not overlap. Pin or tack them through to the ironing blanket to prevent slipping, then secure with strips of adhesive tape, cut half an inch longer than the tear. Press lightly with a warm iron. If carefully done the mend will be invisible on the right side.

A hole can be patched in the same way if you have a piece of the material. Be careful that the grain of the patch follows the same direction as that of the garment. It is best to cut the edges quite straight all round the hole.

Take the patch in position on the wrong side of the garment. Turn over to the right side, tack once, again, then, with matching cotton, or better still with strands of the actual material run-stitch along the grain of the material, taking the stitches through the double material, and just over the edge of the hole. Make very small stitches, and work from the right side so that you can keep your lines straight. The patch should be about a quarter of an inch larger all round, this provides for any pull on the patch. Don't pull the stitches too tight.

When finished, turn to wrong side, and press with warm iron over a damp cloth.

Torn Net Curtains

Holes can be patched invisibly in net curtains, if you have a piece of the same net, and matching cotton. Cut the edges of the tear straight. Lay curtain flat on the table, right side down, and place patch in position. This should be about a quarter of an inch larger all round.

Match up the holes, then tack in position all round. Over-sew the two thicknesses together, keeping to the lines.

Afterwards carefully cut away the loose edges on both sides of the patch. For better security a second line of overcasting can be worked. Use sharp embroidery scissors for trimming.

Press well on the wrong side and the patch will be invisible. That is much better than darning a large surface, but it is essential to see that the holes correspond, and the lines run straight.

SATISFACTORY YEAR

China Emporium Limited Annual Meeting

Despite the reduction in trade at the close of the year owing to the fall of Canton and Hankow and the depreciation of the Chinese National Currency, a very satisfactory report for the year was presented by Hon. Sir Shou-son Chow, Chairman, at the annual meeting of the China Emporium Limited yesterday. A dividend of 80 cents per share was declared.

Supporting the Chairman were Hon. Mr. T. N. Chau, Hon. Mr. Li Tse-fong, Messrs. Fung Fook-tin, Kan Tong-po, Chan Lim-pak, P. K. Kwok, Chan Tse-jei, Chan Man-chi, Fung Ping-fan (Directors), M. Chan Har (General Manager), Chung Kwian-ting (manager), Chan Hau-leung (sub-manager) and W. K. Chhn (sub-manager and secretary).

Presenting the report, Sir Shou-son Chow said:

The profit for the period under review together with the balance brought forward from the last account amounts to $258,321.58 which your Directors recommend should be dealt with as follows:

To pay a dividend of 80 cents per share $106,903.20
To write off Preliminary & Formation Expenses 40,000.00
To write off Land and Building 30,000.00
To write off Furniture and Fixtures 35,070.53
To write off Bad and Doubtful Debts 2,000.00
To Bonus to Founders, Directors, Managers and Staff 19,014.20
To carry forward to the credit of a new account 25,207.03

The Directors are happy to be able to place before you such a satisfactory result of the year's working and they feel no doubt that you will approve the above method of distribution.

You will notice that the writing off of $40,000 under the heading of Preliminary & Formation Expenses will mean the entire elimination of this account. I think this is a sound policy in view of the fact that the company has now been established for over seven years.

Marked Improvement

During the period under review there had been a marked improvement in the volume of business resultant from the gradual improvement in general trade in the first few months, but towards the close of the year, owing to the fall of Canton and Hankow which interrupted the free movement of trade with the interior and the heavy depreciation of the Chinese National Currency which reduced the purchasing power of the public, this improvement had not been maintained. However, your Directors are able to report that although the volume of increased business did not come up to their expectation, yet on the whole the turnover exceeded that of the previous year.

The Directors wish to report that the second drawing for the redemption of $100,000.00 of the Company's Debentures took place on June 1, under the supervision of the trustee for the Debenture holders. All those numbers that had been drawn were paid at the beginning of this month, thus reducing the outstanding amount of Debentures to $800,000.00 at the present time.

I am sure shareholders will be pleased to hear that the financial condition of the Company has now greatly improved under the constant and careful attention of our Supervisors and Managers. I think it is your wish that I should convey to them your hearty thanks for their joint efforts in bringing the Company's finance to its present healthy condition and in making the year's working such a success.

I now beg formally to propose that the report of the Directors and Accounts for the year ended March 31, 1939, as presented, be adopted.

Following the unanimous adoption of the report and accounts, Mr. T. N. Chau, Mr. Chan Man-chi and Mr. Fung Ping-fan were re-elected to the Board of Directors.

Messrs. Percy Smith Seth and Fleming were re-elected auditors for the year.

ILLEGAL OPERATION

Jury Investigates Death Of Married Woman

An inquiry into the death of Liu Ying, 33, married woman, who died at the Queen Mary Hospital on June 5, was heard before Mr. T. J. Houston at the Central Magistracy yesterday.

A Jury comprising Messrs. G. J. P. Carey (Foreman), A. J. Abing, and E. Ernest Low assisted the Coroner.

Dr. P. R. T. Naidu, Medical Officer of the Queen Mary Hospital, said that on June 4 Liu was admitted to the hospital suffering from internal haemorrhage. She died two hours later. On performing a post-mortem on June 5, Dr. Naidu said he found no signs of internal diseases, nor were there external injuries. Liu was fat and very anemic. In the abdomen was a quantity of free blood, which came from two ruptures in the uterus.

On being asked by Mr. Houston, Dr. Naidu described instruments necessary to perform an abortion, and said the injuries might have been caused by such instruments. In the absence of external injuries the ruptures could not have been caused by the woman falling. The cause of death was internal haemorrhage.

Yip Kam, husband of Liu, said a few days before he had taken his wife to the Queen Mary Hospital after she had complained of pains in her abdomen. About a fortnight before she entered the hospital she had been consulting Chinese doctors.

Yip said he did not see these doctors as he had to go to work, but his wife had told him that she had consulted them and that they said she was pregnant. Yip said that after his wife's death his son told him that she had had a fall.

The son, Yip Kwok-man, 13, said some time before Liu entered hospital she had been consulting a few Chinese doctors and on all these occasions he had accompanied her. The doctors only felt her pulse. She told him once that she had fallen but he had not seen the accident.

Wan Choy-man one of the doctors who Liu had consulted, said she came to him complaining of pains in her stomach and fever. When asked by Mr. Houston what prescription he had given, Wan said it was introduction to other medicines. After feeling her pulse he decided she was pregnant.

Lau Hon-ping and Lal Fung-leung, doctors, gave evidence of a similar nature.

Mr. Houston said there was no doubt that Liu had died of internal haemorrhage and that if the Jury were satisfied that death was due to an illegal operation they should bring in a verdict to that effect. On the other hand if they found that the evidence was not strong enough to reach such a verdict, they should return the finding that Liu had died of internal haemorrhage from causes unknown.

After retiring for 10 minutes, the Jury returned a verdict of death as the result of internal haemorrhage caused by an illegal operation performed by a person or persons unknown.

"Obstinate British Attitude" Leads To New Mass Hysteria TOKYO NEGOTIATIONS BELIEVED COLLAPSING

TOKYO, July 21.
IT IS revealed that Mr. H. Arita had a conference with the Premier, Baron Hiranuma on Thursday afternoon, and then held a joint conference with Foreign Office and War Office officials, with the result that it was decided that Japan should not accept the revisions contained in the memorandum Sir Robert Craigie handed to Mr. Arita on Wednesday afternoon.
The "Asahi Shimbun" states that these revisions virtually amounted to a refusal of the demands contained in the memorandum Mr. Arita handed to the British Ambassador on Wednesday morning.
The "Nichi Nichi Shimbun" states that the joint conference agreed that Japan should push her original objective, even at the cost of the parity, unless Britain changes her present attitude.—Reuter.

$20,000,000 FOR TURKS Big Defence Loan Is Reported

LONDON, July 20.
ENGLAND has pledged herself to assist Turkey in the fortification of the Dardanelles, according to the "Evening Standard."

The paper also asserts that Britain has granted Turkey a new loan of £20,000,000 for this purpose, this sum to be used for the purchase of the necessary war materials.—Trans-Ocean.

Loan For Germany?
LONDON, July 20.—There are unconfirmed rumours here that Sir Horace Wilson, Permanent Secretary to the British Treasury, has had two meetings with Doctor Helmut Woltke, Ministerial Director of the Reich Ministry of Economy, when they discussed the possibility of a huge international loan to Germany.
It is said the loan would be used for the transformation of Germany from a war to a peace time basis on condition Hitler agrees to a drastic limitation of armaments.—United Press.

Agreement In Sight Anglo-Polish Pact Negotiations

LONDON, July 20.
"REUTERS" diplomatic correspondent understands that the Anglo-Polish negotiations made considerable progress today, and signature to the agreement may be expected very shortly.

It is understood that the operation comprises two parts: firstly, the loan of £5,000,000 to be devoted to armament and raw materials purchased in this country; secondly, a loan of £5,000,000 cash, which the Polish Government is at liberty to expend in other countries, subject to slight reservations which are not likely to be regarded as a handicap.

In conjunction with this operation, the French Government will authorise the loan of 500,000,000 francs to Poland for the purchase of war materials.—Reuter Special.

"Trans-Ocean" Says Deadlock Reached

LONDON, July 20.—The Anglo-Polish loan negotiations appear to have entered a critical stage.
It was learnt this evening that the Polish financial expert, Colonel Koc will probably leave London for Warsaw on Friday or Saturday to report to his Government.

The present deadlock in the negotiations is due to the fact that TOKYO, July 21.—"Some progress was made towards an agreement," says a terse communique issued by the Foreign Office following this morning's conversations between the Foreign Minister, Mr. Arita, and the British Ambassador, Sir Robert Craigie.

The conversations which commenced at 11.05 a.m., adjourned at 12.45 p.m. until to-morrow.
Informed quarters understand that to-day's conversations took place in a strained atmosphere. The fate of the Anglo-Japanese parleys has already been decided as a result of to-day's talks, they believe.

Anti-British Agitation
The crux of the discussion, according to competent observers, was whether Britain would recognise the existence of a virtual state of war in China and the measures taken by Japan in dealing with the new situation.

Japan still remains firm on her claims for discontinuation of Britain's alleged policy of assistance to China.
At the outset of to-day's meeting, Sir Robert Craigie stated the views of his home Government regarding Japan's basic proposals in accordance with fresh instructions from London.
Following his interview with the British Envoy, the Foreign Minister called on the Premier, Baron Hiranuma, at the latter's official residence, at 1 p.m. The Premier was informed of the outcome of Mr. Arita's latest conversations with Ambassador Craigie.—Domei.

Both Stand Pat
TOKYO, July 21.—Following the British Government's "obstinate stand," nation-wide agitation against the "hostile attitude" of Britain towards Japan is now nearing its point, the Japan Times claims.
The paper states that letters of encouragement to the Government are pouring in tremendous numbers from every part of Japan.

Public halls and other meeting-places at every village, town and city are being occupied day and night by those wishing to speak against Britain and those wishing to listen to them.
At Fukuoka, in Kyushu, the Municipal Assembly held an anti-British meeting on Wednesday afternoon and sent letters of encouragement to Premier Kichiro Hiranuma, Foreign Minister Arita, War Minister Itagaki, Navy Minister Yonai and General Sugiyama, Commander-in-Chief of the Japanese Expeditionary Force to North China and another letter to the British Ambassador, Sir Robert Craigie, demanding abandonment of the "hostile attitude" against Japan.—Domei.

New Instructions

The report from Sir Robert Craigie on the Tokyo talks, which at present is being examined by the British Cabinet, was not at all satisfactory, says the "Daily Telegraph".
The paper says that the report mentions a number of Japanese demands which England would have to meet if the negotiations are to be a success.

The paper adds that new instructions were sent to the British Ambassador last night.—Trans-Ocean.

Baby Found By Police Couple Charged With Dumping

AN UNUSUAL CHARGE claimed the attention of Mr. E. Himsforth at the Kowloon Magistracy this morning, when a married couple, Loung Fuk, 30, and Yeung Yip, 22, were charged with abandoning a female child, seven days old, in a field at the junction of Lovent Road and Argyle Street on the night of July 19.
The child was still alive when recovered by the Police.
Inspector H. E. Rogers, who prosecuted, asked for a remand of three days, which was granted.

New Chamberlain Plan Reported APPEASEMENT SAID IN OFFING?

LONDON, July 20.
IT HAS been reliably reported here that Britain is preparing a "positive peace plan" to submit to Hitler late this summer if the Government's present policy fails to ensure European tranquility.

Official circles refuse to make any comment on the reports. Diplomatic circles said the tentative plan is as follows:—

1.—To ask Germany to sacrifice some armaments and to request guarantees that disarmament will be actually brought into effect.
2.—Britain to obtain a huge loan for Hitler to transform German industry from a wartime to a peacetime basis. (Nazi sources have denied that Sir Horace Wilson and Doctor Woltke have had conversations on such a loan).
3.—Britain to consider further concessions to Germany, such as colonies, after the arms reduction is under way.

Diplomatic circles also express doubts as to the success of such a plan, believing that Hitler will not consent to the unilateral disarmament of Germany.—United Press.

Hitler Ready For Peace Move?

BERLIN, July 20.
IT IS understood that Hitler is scheduled to reconsider, with the Danzig and Nazi leaders at Berchtesgaden next week, what is popularly termed the "Hitler plan" for a peaceful solution of the various problems.

The plan is supposed to envisage the question of Danzig independently from that of the Polish corridor.

Hitler is at present at Berchtesgaden with his intimate advisers.
The general view here is that the situation is not materially altered, that military preparations are proceeding, and that the peace plan ports have been brought into evidence by the desire of all parties for some sort of compromise, which is emphasised by the press restraint in handling the Danzig Polish shooting incident.—United Press.

May Denounce Accord

ROME, July 19.—The Italian Government contemplated denouncing the Anglo-Italian Agreement of April 10, 1938, local political quarters claimed to-day.

They based their declarations partly on an article published in the "Giornale d'Italia," which is edited by Signor Virginio Gayda and generally regarded as Signor Benito Mussolini's mouthpiece.
Signor Gayda referred to the recent "freezing" of Anglo-Italian relations, basing his article on foreign press commentaries about the bombing of London.—Trans-Ocean.

PICKETS TO AID ANGLO BOYCOTT

TOKYO, July 20.
MEASURES for the boycott of British goods were formulated to-day by the anti-British boycott campaign committee in Tientsin, according to a Japanese despatch.

The measures include picketing and the appointment of special agents to popularise the boycott.

The pickets would urge firms and warehouses to suspend sales of British articles, but compensation would be paid for loss of trade.

Bombing Of Civilians
LONDON, July 20.—Mr. Arthur Henderson asked in the House of Commons to-day if the Government would enquire whether any government, with representative in China, have now obtained full information regarding cases of bombardment by Japanese aircraft of civilians; whether such information has now been sent to the League Council in accordance with its resolution of May 1939; and whether the British representative on the Council will ask for its publication forthwith.

Mr. R. A. Butler said that Viscount Halifax had received no reports on this subject from the League Secretariat.

He recalled that, at the time the resolution was adopted, the British Government, in common with other governments represented on the Council, agreed that reports received by the Council should be published provided the government furnishing them raised no objection.—Reuter.

Tokyo Talks Continue
TOKYO, July 21.—The third conversation between the Foreign Minister, Mr. Arita, and the British Ambassador, Sir Robert Craigie, regarding the Tientsin situation, will take place at the official residence of the Foreign Minister this afternoon.

Political circles attach much importance to to-day's meeting, during which they understand it will be made clear whether the alleged discrepancies between Japan and Britain are insuperable or not.
It is understood that there were several outstanding points on which the negotiators failed to agree during the second session of the conversations on Wednesday.—Domei.

TANNENBURG, July 20.—General Von Brauchitsch, Commander-in-Chief of the German Army, addressing graduates of the German Military Academy here to-day, and presumably directing a warning to Poland that East Prussia is German soil, said: "The soil upon which we are meeting to-day is historically and purely German. We are not looking for a fight, but we are not afraid to fight."

Shanghai Market Demoralised

CHINESE DOLLAR SLUMPS AGAIN

THE CHINESE dollar slumped to its lowest level in history as a result of the demoralisation of the Shanghai Exchange this morning.
Opening at yesterday's closing quotation of 4½d, the dollar dropped to 4d. by 9.30 a.m., with an evident weak undertone.

Twenty minutes later it dropped a further one-eighth to 3¾d. Quotation against U.S. dollars at 9.30 a.m. was 7¼ cents, whilst the Hongkong dollar was being quoted at $3.65, the highest premium in history.

The cash rate at 9.40 a.m. was one-eighth above the spot exchange quotation of 3¾d.

The inter-bank rate at the opening of the market was 4½ in terms of sterling and 8½ cents against U.S. currency.

The yen was quoted at 83 sellers, 85 buyers.

Chinese began a frenzied effort to unload their Chinese currency when it appeared as if the market had not yet met its bottom level, and there was a heavy demand for all forms of foreign currency or securities.

The announcement that Hua Hsing notes would be stabilised at 6d. resulted in $3,000,000 worth changing hands yesterday, and the premium on Hua Hsing notes was 141 at noon.

Yen Worth 130—160
SHANGHAI, July 21.—With the Chinese dollar at 4d, exchange shops are demanding between 130 and 160 Chinese cents for one yen.—Reuter.

Demand For Gold
SHANGHAI, July 20.—The prices of gold bullion soared skyward in the local market to-day as holders of Chinese dollars endeavoured to find a way out of the precipitant legal tender into the bullion market.

Starting from $3.00 at the opening quotations, gold bullion rose to $3.60, $3.70, $3.80 and $3.90 during a single day.

The exchange quotations of the Chinese dollar which for a moment stood at 4½d. on London and 8½ cents on New York, were later swept by the bullion whirlwind, and the closing quotations declined to 4½d. and 4½d. on London and 8 and 8½ cents U.S.

The Yen closed at 91 buyers and 92 sellers.—Domei.

St. Anthony's Rector Dies

Passing Of Veteran Catholic Priest

THE DEATH occurred at the Queen Mary Hospital shortly after 12 o'clock this morning of the Rev. Father John Pedrazzini, veteran of the China missionary field and well-known and popular Rector of St. Anthony's Church in Hongkong.

The late Father Pedrazzini, who was born at Imola (Emilia of Romagna) in Italy in 1884, came to China in 1914, and was associated with missionary activities at Shekhi until 1924.

Subsequently he was stationed at Macao, where he remained until he proceeded to Italy and the United States on well-deserved leave in 1928.
Even during his vacation, Father Pedrazzini could not abstain from work, and until he returned to the Far East in 1934, associated himself with work in San Francisco, where he became very popular with the Portuguese colony.

On his return to China, Father Pedrazzini was appointed Rector of St. Anthony's Church at West Point, a position he held until his death.
The funeral will take place to-morrow. Requiem Mass will be held at St. Anthony's Church at 8 a.m., and the cortege will pass the Monument at 9.30 a.m.

France To Build More Warships

PARIS, July 20.—A communique issued by the Minister of Marine, states that M. Campinchi has signed an order for the building of two new cruisers, six submarines, and two new 8,000-ton cruisers which will have a speed of considerably over 30 knots, which will make them redoubtable fighting ships.
The new submarines will be 800 tons each.—Reuter Special.

JAPANESE LAND AT SWABUE

FOLLOWING two abortive attempts earlier this week, Japanese marines have succeeded in landing at Swabue, the important port 70 miles north-east of Hongkong.

The landing was effected under a withering barrage from warships and bombing planes.

The Chinese defenders put up considerable resistance, and succeeded in holding off the Japanese for three hours after they landed.

The bombardment, however, completely crumbled the Chinese defences, and at 1.30 p.m. the Chinese withdrew to new lines.
The Japanese are now reported to be advancing from Swabue to Yiuwei, about eight miles from Hongkong.

Only a few British and other foreign residents are at Swabue, which is the centre of an important mining district.

A Protestant Mission is stationed there.

LATEST

BRITAIN CAVES IN, REPORT

AN URGENT message from Tokyo at 3 p.m. to-day reported from authoritative sources that Great Britain has capitulated to certain Japanese demands at the Tokyo conference.

"Domei" confirms the report by saying that Sir Robert Craigie has agreed to recognise the basic Japanese principles regarding the Tientsin situation.

An agreement is claimed to have been reached as a result of this morning's conversations, which concluded shortly before 1 p.m.

Prospects of a settlement of outstanding differences are now reported as "bright."

The British Ambassador is understood to have called to his Home Government a full report of the outcome of this morning's negotiations.

An emergency session of the Japanese Cabinet will be held at 9 a.m. to-morrow to confirm the results of the conversations, and to determine Japan's attitude regarding future negotiations.

The Japanese Government will, announces "Domei," issue a statement to-morrow regarding the agreement reached between Mr. Arita and Sir Robert Craigie.

DOLLAR UP

SHANGHAI, 2.30 p.m.—The exchange market was much steadier this afternoon.

The Chinese dollar rose to 4-7/32d. at the post-11.15 opening.—United Press.

And Lonely Ladies Are Left Forlorn

NEW YORK HAS LOST ITS "SOCIAL ESCORTS"—HANDSOME YOUNG MEN WITH NICE MANNERS WHO WOULD, FOR A FEE, HIT THE HIGH SPOTS WITH LONELY LADIES WITH MONEY TO SPEND.

Ted Peckham, 24-years-old United States university graduate, who started a bureau to put the handsome young men and the lonely ladies in touch, has been denounced as "a menace to the city and to visitors" by Justice William R. Bayes, who found him guilty of operating an employment agency without a licence.

He fined him $50, forbade him to supply any more escorts until he gets a licence, and gave him a suspended sentence of three months in the workhouse (a modified American form of imprisonment).

As it was the Licence Commissioner Paul Moss who led the exposure of his methods in court, it seems unlikely that Peckham will get his licence.

"We have been trying to stamp out this social service evil for the last four years," Moss told the court in New York.

Two of the witnesses against Peckham were formerly escorts.

One, handsome young policeman Thomas Farrell, who concealed his identity to get into Peckham's service, told how he received an order to take a woman to the theatre and dinner.

"Peckham's secretary," he related, "told me I would get four dollars out of the ten-dollar (£2) fee for working from 4 p.m. to 8 p.m."

COULDN'T GET FEES

"I met the lady at the Hotel Astor and she gave me ten dollars for expenses. We went to the theatre and

The next day, said Farrell, he had trouble in collecting the fee from Peckham.

Another witness, Charles L. Seely, who spoke with an English accent, said he also had difficulty in collecting his fees.

London knows Mr. Peckham very well, because it was in November 1939 that he arrived to start a branch of his business, the London Social Escort Bureau.

By December he had 30 personable young men working for him, accompany lonely ladies to dinner, theatres, dances, receiving a proportion of the fees handed over.

Soon he was reporting it a success, but by the following September he was bewailing the fact that English girls refused to pay for male escorts.

"GO GETTERS"

"English girls are 'go-getters' and don't have to hire a friend for the evening," he said, "they know the sort of young man they want and see that they find him."

He said then that he had branches

in all parts of the world—in Paris, Rome, Vienna, and Budapest as well as London and New York—and that he made £4,000 a year.

Later in the month, Mr. Peckham arrived in New York with the announcement that seven British peers had signed to appear as a chorus in a New York revue.

In London, the peers mentioned indignantly denied the suggestion.

Byron Tomb Opened

WAS it really the body of the poet Byron that the British frigate brought home from Greece more than a century ago? Did the Greeks, for whose independence Byron died fighting, retain their hero's heart and brain?

For many years these questions have remained unanswered—for many years the persistent legend worried the vicar of Hucknall, Nottinghamshire, the Rev. T. G. Barber, in whose church the poet was buried 114 years ago.

This opportunity came when matters of archaeological interest had to be probed in that part of his ancient church where Byron is buried.

Consent of the Home Office and the present Lord Byron had to be obtained and all the witnesses were pledged to secrecy.

The work was carried out with the utmost reverence.

EMBALMED

It took some time for the workmen to open the vault. Descending into it after tests were made to prove the safety of the air, the vicar found an urn inscribed:

"Within this urn are deposited the heart and brain of the deceased Lord Noel Byron."

Close to it was a leaden case in which was the coffin with the body of Byron himself. The leaden case had been torn open and the lid of the coffin was loose.

Ate Four Ounces Of Arsenic—Lived

AHMEDABAD.

KAY KHUSHRAV BARJORJI VAKIL, Parsee youth aged 20, did this to prove his faith in Zoroaster, the prophet by whom Parsees swear: he swallowed four ounces of arsenic, enough, it is stated, to kill 900 people, and lived.

He swallowed the arsenic at a gathering of Parsees, Hindus and Moslems, having previously publicly announced that he would either take a large dose of poison, pour molten lead over his body or hang himself by a rope and survive owing to his belief in the Zoroastrian religion.

Traders Ask Yard For Help

SMALL traders and cafe owners in the Elephant and Castle district intend to petition Scotland Yard for protection against London's "Dead-End kids"—gangs of youths who are wrecking and ruining their businesses.

Mark Selby, Jewish owner of a milk bar in the Walworth-road, a war-wounded veteran with four children, committed suicide after he had been beaten up and his premises wrecked by the gangs because he refused to supply them with free cigarettes and refreshments.

Recently gangsters marched into the milk bar he once owned and threatened the managers. Two plain-clothes men from Southwark Police Station, who had been posted to the vicinity, appeared and the men quickly vanished.

WINDOW SMASHED

A few minutes later the plate-glass window of a jeweller's shop in Walworth-road was smashed and several rings stolen. Later a free fight started in a cafe in the nearby London-road. A man threw a cup of scalding tea into a customer's face.

The night attendant at the cafe blew the police whistle. He bought some days off, but no one ran to his assistance.

Police officers with a tender too busy dealing with another disturbance opposite the Trocadero Cinema.

"Every night is a night of terror," the manageress of the late Mr. Selby's milk bar said.

"Our takings were about £25 a day. Now they have dropped to £5. Between 8 o'clock and midnight, usually our most profitable time, we have drawn less than £1."

"It means ruin for this bar. We will have to close down, and several people will be out of work."

Mr. Vakil distributed to the gathering a quantity of what he ate with a view to proving that it really was arsenic that he was to swallow.

After explaining the importance of Zoroastrianism, he took the poison, and in case the gathering might suspect that he was taking an antidote, he threw away a glass of water which was offered to him.

The result of an analysis of the Arsenic by Dr. M. S. Shah, Professor of Chemistry, Gujarat College, Ahmedabad, showed that what Mr. Vakil swallowed was 99.749 arsenical.

"ALL COULD DO IT"

In an interview Mr. Vakil stated that what he achieved was "entirely due to his great faith in Zoroastrianism."

He Wants Lion Farm By Thames

NEXT spring Mr. Stanley Turpin, of Sandhills Meadows, Shepperton, hopes to open the first lion-breeding farm in England. If he finds the trade to circuses and zoos justifies it, he will stock his estate up to 300 animals. The farm is to be on a 12-acre estate near the Thames.

Mr. Turpin has had no experience in breeding lions, but is confident he can manage them. He has just returned after a three-years' tour of South Africa and proposes to join forces with an experienced lion breeder now on his way from Africa.

Sunbury Council have refused to approve his scheme, but Mr. Turpin says that they have no power to stop him.

He said: "I am going to house my lions in lairs of stone, so they will live under natural conditions. 'I don't see why the neighbourhood should be frightened. Lions take no notice of you unless you provoke them. My wife is not at all perturbed.'"

'Mainspring' of Mayfair Thieves Gets 3 Years

Judge on Crime Under Cloak of Friendship

THE following sentences were passed by the Recorder, Sir Gerald Dodson, at the Old Bailey recently on the four men accused in the Mayfair jewel thefts case:

Victor Frederick Cochrane Hervey, 23 (son of Lord Herbert Hervey and nephew of the Marquis of Bristol), was sent to penal servitude for three years.

William Goodwin (30) received two years' imprisonment; George Ernest Arthur Hering (23), 18 months, and Geoffrey Coop (24), nine months.

The Recorder told Hervey that he realised he was the main-spring of the conspiracies and that the crimes were of the meanest description. "How low you have stooped you alone know," declared the judge.

To Hering the Recorder said: "Your part in this is of the meanest kind. You betrayed a friend, Mrs. Daubeny."

Hervey and Goodwin had been found guilty of conspiring with others to steal property belonging to Mrs. Daubeny, of Queen Street, Mayfair, and Mrs. Gabrielle Burley, of Seymour Place, Park Lane.

Hering (who has been referred to by the prosecution as Peter Proud) and Coop had pleaded guilty to conspiring to steal jewellery belonging to Mrs. Daubeny. Hering had also pleaded guilty to conspiring to steal Mrs. Burley's property.

Three-Day Trial

During the three-day trial, Hering gave evidence for the prosecution.

Detective Inspector Berry said that Coop was a former public schoolboy and had gone to a military college. He obtained a commission in an infantry regiment in January, 1935, but because he was unable to keep out of debt and because he was connected with numerous worthless cheques and appeared to have had no interest in his work, he was called on to resign in December that year.

About that time an allowance which he had from his family ceased. He was later a salesman selling silk stockings, and in February, 1937, he enlisted in the Royal Army Ordnance Corp as a private.

He came to London in April, 1938, and as a result of being convicted of

NORTH AUSTRALIA AIR PATROL

DARWIN. The North Australian Air Force station will be opened about a year before it was expected, "with the arrival here shortly of a skeleton unit, consisting of one squadron of Avro-Anson bombers."

The Federal Government has given no explanation of the move, but it is understood to be due to the growing world tension.

The squadron will use the Ross Smith airport, this being the first occasion on which an Air Force station has been opened on a civil aerodrome.

Portable steel huts and hangars have been erected for the accommodation of men and machines.

The bombers will be engaged in reconnaissance duty, probably combining constabulary service and the patrolling of the Timor and Arutara coastline.

GERMAN PURCHASES OF MANGANESE

CAPE TOWN. South African exports of raw materials to Germany and Italy, particularly Germany, have grown considerably in recent years. At present Germany is by far the biggest importer of the Union's manganese.

Last year Germany headed the list as the Union's chief foreign purchaser, having taken £4,992,338 worth of exports, compared with £4,982,050 in 1937. Among the exported raw materials were 234,000 tons of manganese ore, valued at £355,237, copper bar to the value of £44,402, and 9,396 tons of scrap metal valued at £2,870. Germany also purchased a considerable quantity of copper ore from South West Africa valued at £47,154, and £97,897 worth of vanadium ore.

Aided Man Of 80 —Was Killed

AN allegation that a man was killed when he went to the aid of another man, aged 80, was made at Shipton, Yorkshire, recently.

Richard William Matthews, 57-year-old quarryman, of Barnoldswick, was charged with the murder of William Taylor, deputy at Craven Lodging House, Barnoldswick.

The prosecuting solicitor said Matthews would not have the protection of the defence of drink, because he was not drunk.

He had been visiting certain clubs, and returned to the lodging house perfectly sober, it was suggested.

CHALLENGE TO FIGHT

He made his way to a room where cooking took place. He was in a truculent mood and threw out a general challenge to fight.

William Henry Ward, aged 80, said he would like to be quiet.

Matthews advanced in such a threatening way that Taylor said, "Do not strike the old man."

Then Matthews, added the solicitor, made a rush at Taylor, knocked him and the old man to the floor, and kicked Taylor in the stomach.

While Taylor was groaning, Matthews, it was suggested, said, "I will leave you alone, interfering," and kicked him savagely, in the face.

Matthews pleaded not guilty, and was committed for trial.

"Adam" As A Shilling Show at Blackpool

Fleet Street.

Mr. Jacob Epstein, interviewed recently on the proposed exhibition of his new statue "Adam" at Blackpool at a shilling a time, said:

"My first reaction was rage. I wanted to stop it. But on second thoughts I have changed my mind. After all, art is for everybody or it is nothing. My statues are not made just for the intellectuals of London. Let us see what the average man and woman think of my 'Adam.' Let us hear what the people of Lancashire have to say about it."

"WHAT BLACKPOOL SAYS"

"If the statue is properly shown to them as a work of art, not as a sensational exhibition—a peep-show, —I have no objection at all. On the whole, I feel now that it is most interesting to hear what Blackpool holiday crowds have to say. Perhaps they will not reject it—as the Tate Gallery would have rejected it, as the Tate Gallery did reject my 'Genesis' when it was offered to them."

"As for the owner, honestly I don't know who he is or what his name is. But assuredly I have not got £7,000 for the statue or anything like it. Financially the sale has proved me very little. It is said that the owner is an Australian goldminer. Well, perhaps he is. I don't know. It is nothing to do with me. Perhaps the statue should have been bought for

AN African prince, Usman Liman, 39-year-old son of the Emir of Katsina, who arrived in England on Tuesday by air from Kano, Nigeria, on his first visit, had the biggest thrill of his life recently for twopence.

Accompanied by a reporter and Mr. P. F. Masterman-Smith, an English official from Nigeria, he made his first trip on the London Underground Railway.

Usman had heard many wonderful tales about London, but he was sceptical about the railway that "travelled under the houses and streets."

When I met the Emir (states the reporter) and his two sons at their London hotel, writes a News Chronicle reporter, they greeted me by taking my hand in both of theirs.

Change In Army Council

A change in the constitution of the Army Council was notified in a recent "London Gazette." The effect of it is that Engineer Vice-Admiral Sir Harold Brown, Director-General of Munitions Production, is no longer a member.

The post of Director-General of Munitions Production was created in 1936. In 1937, when the Army Council was reorganised, Sir Harold Brown was appointed to take over the duties of Master-General of Ordnance from Lt.-Gen. Sir Hugh Elles, who relinquished that post to facilitate a reorganisation under which the two departments were merged.

It seems that in future the Army Council will not have either a Director-General of Munitions Production or a Master-General of Ordnance. This suggests that the setting up of the Ministry of Supply, at present only in an embryo state, has been anticipated.

The duties connected with the Ordnance will continue to be done by the Director-General of Munitions.

Although Sir Harold Brown has not yet left the War Office, sections of his department are daily being removed to the Adelphi, where the Minister of Supply is to have his new quarters.

"Very High Class Way"

Arrangements have been concluded for the exhibition of "Adam," the latest work of Jacob Epstein, at Blackpool during the season. Mr. Lawrence Wright, the producer and music publisher, states that he proposes to exhibit the "Adam" statue until the close of the season in Blackpool, when he intends to take it to New York.

Mr. Wright said that the statue will be on show at the "Castle" a building on North Shore that has been empty for thirty years. The building is being elaborately redecorated, and the statue, said Mr. Wright, will be shown "in a very high class way."

Mr. Wright says that he does not know the name of the owner of the statue, but he is emphatic that Mr. Epstein cannot object to the proposed exhibition. "He cannot object," he said firmly. "The statue has been bought outright without restrictions or conditions." Admission at a shilling a head, he added, "will bring £20,000 to Blackpool."

some museum. But what is an artist to do? He must sell his work. That is all I can say."

ADVICE TO NURSING MOTHERS

It is very important, doctors say, not to overtax your system immediately after the birth of a child. When you are feeding baby yourself, you should take plenty of easily digested nourishment.

For that reason, doctors throughout China recommend Horlicks. They have proved that Horlicks stimulates the appetite, promotes sound sleep and strengthens the whole system. Also Horlicks increases the supply of maternal milk and ensures the success of breast feeding.

Year Of Din

NOW and then a small voice is raised against the noise nuisance. One wonders why it is drowned by the blare which is modernity, or do the great mass of the public like to move in an atmosphere of false excitement and noise as an anodyne to the disturbing events of the outside world?

Noise can be stimulating, even intoxicating, but it is also tiring, and in one quarter there has been a call for Government action, as the number of inconsiderate noise-makers increases every day, and the effect upon the mental health of the community is held to be serious.

As a contributor to the cacophony of 1939, the "mike" has much to answer for, from the adonoidal accents of the crooner to the violent rhetoric of those Continental politicians whose utterances have become as the thundering of the gods, reaching to every corner of the earth.

There is no escape—except to turn it off at the source. There is a law of sorts in Hongkong to prevent the disturbing of the peace after 10 p.m. but that does not stop the owners of the super-super-something-or-the-other.

Those who are compelled to listen willy-nilly, and who esteem escape from those stirring messages which shake the world would acclaim a tightening up of whatever restrictions there are against blaring loud-speakers.

The Army Of To-day

The fathers of the youths now being called up for compulsory service at Home are the men who helped to initiate the change in the military attitude towards the rank and file. When they stepped forward in 1914, it was to join an Army bound by that iron discipline which the civilian found irksome and difficult to understand.

"First Hundred Thousand" did much to break down the old barriers in an institution that was ripe for change. They proved beyond doubt that the fighting spirit of an Army is not necessarily governed by discipline that could detect insubordination in the twitching of an eye.

There was much to admire in the pre-war Army, in its efficiency and unquestioning obedience, but that superb fighting machine was fashioned in a mould that was often rough-edged. A new spirit is abroad to-day. Gone is the sergeant-major of the "You broke your mother's heart, but you won't break mine" type; the instructor to-day is a teacher in the modern manner.

Perhaps no greater example of the change of heart in officialdom

—Strube in the "Daily Express"

If you say black is white often enough —people will believe it: that is the theory of GOEBBELS and he is practising it in Danzig.

—by—
DENNIS CLARKE

THE ordinary German believes that you and I are "war-mongers" whose sole desire is to encircle and attack Germany.

GOEBBELS has two cardinal principles: First, hammer home your own point of view till people believe it or go dotty. He knows that if you tell most people one thing all the time, and they hear no contradiction, they will come to believe it eventually. Secondly, counter opposing propaganda by picking on its weakest points, suppressing some essential part of it. Roosevelt's peace appeal was handled in this way by the Goebbels Press.

Another function of Dr. Goebbels's propaganda is to work up good will abroad for Germany. In this he has not been successful, so we shall pass it over.

The rules for successful propaganda are laid down by Hitler in his "Mein Kampf." Let us examine them.

HITLER says that propaganda has no morality. It is a means to an end.

It must be directed to the masses. A million workmen are more desirable booty for the propagandist than a handful of aesthetes.

Propaganda must be aimed at people's feelings, not at their heads. "The masses are feminine, like women, to be wooed through their emotions," writes Hitler.

"The masses understand only a master. The rougher and more brutal your phrasing the more people you will convince."

Hitler wrote this from bitter experience of trying to convert people by sweet reason.

In fact, Hitler has the demagogue's contempt for the mass of people. Their receptivity is limited, he writes, their understanding small, their forgetfulness immense. The last point is interesting. Dr. Goebbels is now busy blackening the character of the Mr. Chamberlain whom he described last September as a man of peace.

HITLER maintains that speech is the Queen of all propaganda instruments. People will not spend a penny to buy a newspaper they disagree with. They may throw away a free pamphlet, however forcibly written. But the spoken word, public or private, is all powerful.

He puts his finger on one striking advantage of speech. A writer does could be quoted than the issue of a booklet, "A Welcome to the Militiaman," a bit of good sense and brotherliness in which the reasons for military practices are explained to the "rookie" of 1939. The old barrack square has lost its terrors, and the pathway to efficiency is easier to tread.

not see his audience. A speaker can see from the faces of his audience what effect he is having and attune himself accordingly.

He admits he learned his tactics from the Communists. He learned, he confesses, that in a big meeting the individual's personality is sunk in the audience's. "Though a worm, he becomes part of a big dragon," he comments.

One of the first things to do is to shake a man in his own beliefs; then you may convert him. Stun his critical faculties with pagant and noise.

Be simple. Hitler says men understand right and wrong, black and white, truth and lie. No half measures. The speaker is an angel. His opponents devils.

Don't be objective. Put all the guilt on your opponent, even if he does not deserve it. "Never admit the glimmer of justice on the other side," he says. The masses, writes the Fuehrer, cannot distinguish where the foreign injustice ends and their own injustice begins.

FINALLY the propagandist must concentrate hate on one enemy at a time. Go for Czechoslovakia, for instance, while buttering up Poland and Jugo-Slavia. Their turn will come.

Just now Goebbels is concentrating hate on England, even forgetting Russia.

What a brilliant executor of his chief's ideas Dr. Goebbels has proved. Hitler himself confesses he is astonished at the results obtained by following the above rules.

I often wonder if Dr. Goebbels would get a job on the British Council, our propaganda organisation.

This fact astonishes the average Briton. It baffles him that our policy can be so absurdly misunderstood.

He feels that if he chatted to an ordinary German he would easily convince him that Britain is not "warmongering." He would not, I have talked to many average Germans and never got beyond being told I was a fool or a liar.

I once nearly went crazy arguing with an intelligent German friend about the Italian and German bombing of open cities in Spain. He told me that it was the Republicans who blew up their own towns.

The reason for this state of affairs is one man: Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels.

HE is the magician of propaganda who takes facts and deals them out in the wrong order.

He persuaded the Germans that Czechoslovakia menaced their existence that the Lithuanians treated the Memellanders brutally; that the Austrians were governed by a gang of Bolsheviks and Monarchists.

He is now on the job again. He is persuading his countrymen that the British are a horde of Visigoths bent on the destruction of peaceful Germany; that Mr. Chamberlain is an even more fanatical warmonger than Winston Churchill or Duff Cooper because he deceived Hitler at Munich. I have no doubt he will get away with it again.

For this work Dr. Goebbels earns, nominally, £4,800 a year. He is worth much more, of course, and gets it in the way of liberal expenses, free servants, cars, houses. The splendour of his newest mansion on a lake near Berlin has earned comment. His offices, in a fine old palace on the Wilhelm Platz, are among Berlin's finest.

The doctor's slight body (five feet four inches) supports a large head with a pair of intelligent, almost catlike eyes. His manners are suave. He can be charming when he wants.

BUT he is not liked. No squares are named after him. For days before Goebbels's arrival in conquered Vienna last year I had to wade through slabby newspaper articles explaining what a nice fellow was "Unser Herr Doktor" ("Our Mr. Doctor"). His reception was cold compared with Goering's and Hitler's.

But the doctor has more valuable qualities than popularity. Hitler first discovered the brilliant organising ability of the little Doctor of Philosophy from Heidelberg University. He once described Goebbels as "Geeschelt," which means "clever," not always in the best sense.

So Goebbels withdrew to his propaganda. His triumph is to have transformed millions of comfortable, docile Germans into dauntless Siegfrieds eager to die for Hitler tomorrow—and kept them geared up to that point. Results mark him as one of the most successful men alive.

How has he done it?

ODDLY enough, he copied our methods. Our wartime stories of dead German soldiers being boiled down to provide gun lubricants are the admitted original models of all Dr. Goebbels's paraphernalia.

Hitler himself writes in "Mein Kampf": "It was during the war that we had the best chance of estimating the tremendous results to be obtained from a propaganda system properly carried out. The lack on our side was exploited by the enemy so efficiently that one could say it proved a work of real genius."

"In that propaganda I found admirable sources of instruction."

Hitler instances the effect on his own Bavarian regiment of British leaflets which urged the Bavarians to betray the Prussians, who had got them in the mess they were.

Hitler's first party job was propaganda chief. Goebbels merely took over his chief's ideas and put his brains into organising a propaganda machine to get them over.

Goebbels seized control of the media of news and opinion: newspapers, radio, books, theatres. He forbade anybody but the party to hold public meetings. Those who disobeyed went to concentration camps.

Angriff (Attack) became his personal newspaper. Volkischer Beobachter (People's Observer) became party newspaper. All other papers had to submit their copy for party approval. Propaganda officials watched plays for heresies. Not even comedians escaped censorship.

Meanwhile Nazi teachers took over education. Little Fritz is taught from birth to be a Nazi and nothing else.

BRITISH POLICY IN PALESTINE DEFENDED

Illegal Immigration Is Organised Plan

LONDON, July 20.
A DEBATE on the Palestine problem was initiated in the House of Commons to-day by Mr. Tom Williams (Labour), who said that a further blow had been struck at Jewish aspirations by the suspension of immigration.

The complete cessation of immigration meant that the hopes of tens of thousands of people all over Europe were completely dashed. The Government scheme had completely broken down, and there was neither legal, moral nor ethical right for it.

Contrary To Justice

Neither Mr. MacDonald nor anybody else could suppose on an unwilling people a policy contrary to justice and fair play, and every compromise made in the last 20 years. It wasn't too late to go back to the mandate and to encourage Arabs to co-operate as they did hitherto. Maybe some form of federation was possible, where Arab fear of domination could be completely liquidated, and where the Jews might have further opportunities. Sir Arnold Wilson suggested that the problem could not be solved without bearing in mind that Palestine was merely the southern half of Syria; Syria as a whole should be covered by the federation of one Jewish State, one Christian, and three Arab States working in harmony under the British and French, or Anglo-French supervision, subject to a measure of control by the League of Nations.

Nobody Satisfied

Mr. G. L. M. Mander said that Mr. MacDonald's policy satisfied nobody in Palestine, and he suggested that Mr. MacDonald consider referring the Government policy to the consideration of the Permanent Court of International Justice.

Mr. Duff-Cooper said that the British policy was consistently trying to give absolute impartial treatment to both Jew and Arab, and to fulfil pledges. It was a good policy, but one proof of its failure was that because illegal immigration had succeeded, legal immigration was to be stopped. A stronger and more definite line was required.

The first consideration when two old friends came to ask for assistance was to decide which had the greater need. Mr. Duff-Cooper then suggested that the position of the Arabs, who, since the war had enjoyed greater prosperity and freedom than they had known for centuries, with the plight of the Jews, who, in a long and tragic history, had never endured a more terrible period than now.

Slamming The Door

"The strong arm of the British Empire opened the door to the Jews when all other doors were shut. Shall we slam the door in the face of the long wandering Jew?"

Mr. Malcolm MacDonald, in a speech reaffirming the White Paper policy, said that perhaps nothing could do more to destroy the prospect of peace in Palestine than starting upon a policy, and then completely reversing it, or showing hesitancy, and therefore commencing another long period without a policy at all.

Mr. Duff-Cooper's policy would not produce peace, but would make the whole of the rest of the Arab world implacable enemies to a Jewish national home.

No Prospect Of Peace

There was no policy which would produce immediate peace in Palestine, but he believed that the Government policy contained the basis on which ultimately the Arabs and Jews can settle side by side in peace together.

Mr. MacDonald deprecated the Opposition's remarks about the promise made to the Jews, and a few Opposition references about promises made to the Arabs.

He declared: "We regard the White Paper policy as carrying out faithfully and reconciling faithfully the promises we made to the Jews and Arabs."

Dealing with the attitude of the Mandates Commission, Mr. MacDonald said they had sent their observations to the accredited representatives of the governments concerned, and had asked for comments. The report cannot be completed until those comments are put in.

Soviet Manoeuvres

Mr. MacDonald said he realised that some members were apprehensive of the possibility of the League Council saying that our policy was not in the terms of the mandate. He gave an assurance that if the Council reached a decision, which in their view involved the necessity of altering the mandate, they would not take steps to bring about an alteration until Parliament had had another opportunity to consider the situation.

Referring to the immigration policy, Mr. MacDonald denied that the Government was indifferent to the fate of the refugees in Central Europe. He said that Palestine cannot provide the whole solution to the refugee problem, but it can make a considerable contribution towards the solution of the problem, and it would be untruthful to say that the White Paper policy is barring the door to the settlement of Central European refugees in Palestine. (Cheers)—Reuter.

American Kidnapped

JERUSALEM, July 20.—The British Military authorities here have suspended their efforts to track an Arab band of kidnapers who are holding an American missionary, Mr. Gerald R. Goldner, while the United States Consul General, Mr. George Wadsworth, is making attempts to negotiate for his release.

Mr. Goldner's father, Mr. Jacob Goldner, said they were both en route to Jerusalem when Bedouin Arabs took them to a cave, stole their possessions and released him. They said, however, that his son must remain until a ransom of $5,000 was produced.

Five Arabs have been killed and four wounded almost simultaneously at various points in Tel-Aviv.—United Press.

Illegal Immigrants

Continuing Mr. MacDonald said that in the current six months of immigration "there were 1,300 illegal immigrants between April 1 and May 24, since when British patrols had captured 3,500 illegal immigrants, while between 500 and 1,000 entered the country undetected, and 4,000 more are now on ships approaching the coast of Palestine, intending to force their way into the country."

"It is cruel luck to the trainees in Britain, the children in Germany and other refugees whom we intended to get there under the legal quota system."

"There are other motives in this traffic," declared Mr. MacDonald. "Something like 40 per cent. of the illegal immigrants come not from Greater Germany, but from Poland and Rumania, and those Polish and Rumanian immigrants are being organised and instructed by those responsible for the traffic to throw their papers overboard so that we have no proof whatever on which we could get them accepted back to their countries of origin."

Smash White Paper Policy

"It is an organisation to smash the White Paper policy. That is a position we cannot tolerate. It is creating a serious situation. It is producing very grave unrest among the Arab population. It is making the Arabs—and it is designed by the authors to do so—suspicious of the sincerity of the Government in carrying out its policy. Distrust in our good faith is becoming widespread, not only among the Arabs in Palestine, but in the countries beyond."

Embargo Of Revolt

"That is going to fan the embers of an Arab revolt with results as serious for the Jewish community as anybody else."

"If illegal immigration can be checked, we shall be anxious to restore the proper quotas of legal immigration. We are reviewing the possibilities of action in the countries where the illegal immigrants embark."

"Jewish leaders and Jewish people themselves who have the greatest control over this traffic could reduce it very greatly, and we are entitled to ask for co-operation."—Reuter.

Terrorism Continues

JERUSALEM, July 20.—There was a continuation of terrorist acts in various parts of Palestine to-day, and several bomb explosions were reported to have occurred this evening.

A land mine exploded under a train on the Petal-Tikva Has El Ain route. However no serious damage was caused.

A police officer stepped on a land mine near Kana Hasidim which exploded, injuring him seriously.

Heat Wave Grips Whole Of Greece

The whole of Greece is gripped with a choking heat wave, which has prevented peasants from working on the harvest. The workers found it impossible to continue their labours during the daytime, and now are cutting their crops in the cooler hours of the night.—Trans-Ocean.

Terrible Plight Of Welsh Unemployed

LONDON, July 21.
RELIEF MEASURES for one of the special districts in Monmouthshire are on the verge of failure, according to the "Times".

For years efforts have been made to alleviate the plight of the workers, who have been unemployed, by drawing them into a settlement which has been carried on by private and public subscriptions, while the Treasury has also contributed £102,000.

However, it has never housed more than 400. The "Times" says that the political situation in South Wales has frustrated the experiment as much as some strong capitalist influence, which did not encourage real interest in the idea.—Trans-Ocean.

TURKEY TO BUILD A "SINGAPORE BASE" Military Conversations With French Leaders

Military Talks

Ankara, July 20.
The military conversations between France and Turkey, which were initiated here on Monday by a French Military Mission headed by General Hutzinger, are understood to have proved most satisfactory, ensuring the most efficacious all-round armed co-operation in the case of aggression on the Balkan States or the Near East.

The main topics of the talks appear to have been with regard to rendering the already invincible Dardanelles even more deadly to an enemy; Turkey's policy of a passage for all vessels through the Straits in the case of a conflagration; very close military collaboration between Turkey, and Great Britain extending from the Balkans, Syria and Palestine to Egypt in the case of conflict in the east Mediterranean.

It has also been stated the question of a unified command was also discussed. The talks between General Hutzinger and the chiefs of the Turkish Army are still continuing, and are not expected to end before the end of next week.—United Press.

Financing N. Zealand's Defences Britain Seeks Reciprocity

London, July 20.
The New Zealand Finance Minister, Mr. Nash has announced that the New Zealand Government has placed before the United Kingdom Government the requirements of New Zealand in the financing of imports, including purchases for defence.

The United Kingdom has agreed that credits to £5,000,000 will be made available, or approved on conditions for New Zealand Government purchases, and short-term export credit facilities to £4,000,000 to cover approved exports from the United Kingdom to importers in New Zealand.

A memorandum signed by Mr. Oliver Stanley and Mr. Nash declares that the British Ministers agree that an effective measure to reduce New Zealand exports below the recent abnormally high levels was inevitable.

Mr. Nash undertook to do his utmost to ensure the maximum exports.—Reuter Special.

May Ask Imprisonment For Radio Offences

Intimating that though in previous cases the prosecution had been content with the imposition of fines, in this case they would probably ask for imprisonment. Mr. E. I. Wynne-Jones, Post Master General, appeared for the prosecution against Ma Chang-kong, 28, unemployed, Li Wah, 21, spinner, Wong Tse-ying, 22, spinner and Li Tse, 50, spinner, who were charged before Mr. T. J. Houston at the Central Magistracy this morning with possession of radio communication apparatus at 2 Brexey Path on June 29 without permission. Defendants were remanded one week.

Mr. P. M. Hodgson appeared for the defence. Mr. Wynne-Jones said that the prosecution was satisfied with fourth defendant's statement that she was only an amah, and was willing to withdraw the charges against her. In this case there had been a deliberate attempt at destroying evidence by attempting to throw the set out of the window. There was a considerable number of documents to be investigated, but those so far examined showed that there was a connection between the present case and one previously dealt with. Cash bails of £2,000 for Ma, and £1,000 for Li Wah and Wong Tse-ying were allowed. Li Tse was discharged.

Britain's Air Raid Defences Criticised

LONDON, July 21.
ATTACKS on the British Air Ministry for the insufficiency of air raid defences, which began in the "Daily Mail" a few days ago, were continued to-day.

Apparently in obedience to a hint from official quarters that the articles did not meet with the approval of the authorities, the "Daily Mail" suppressed certain details, the publication of which were "not in national interests."

The published account, however, said to be based on actual experience, declared that at the slightest sign of unfavourable weather, or even if there was a risk that the weather might become unfavourable, training was discontinued, and shooting and searchlight exercises did not take place.

As far as protection from bombs and bomb splinters went, the units had received a purely theoretical instruction. The method of practising with the air sound-detectors was also severely criticised.—Trans-Ocean.

A caution was administered to Francis George Geske alias the Rev. Brother Choe Hoy, 39, of Seattle, United States, residing at the Y.M.C.A. Kowloon, when he appeared before Mr. T. J. Houston at the Central Magistracy this morning charged with failing to notify the Registry of Persons office of his change of address on May 20.

Sub-Inspector Langley said that defendant had lived at 37 Jordan Road on April 16, and after moving to a pent house on the roof of the Wing On Bank Building had gone to stay at the Y.M.C.A. Kowloon on May 20. He had failed to report his change of address.

Defendant stated that he did not know the regulations. S. I. Langley stated that defendant had notified the authorities on two previous occasions of his leaving the Colony, and was, therefore, familiar with the law. Defendant admitted that on those occasions of departing from Hongkong he had reported.

How Kay Stammers Entered Women's Final

A Brilliant Display Against Mrs. Fabyan: Miss Marble's Triumph

London, July 7.
After a match which began at 2 o'clock and finished nearly four and a half hours later, England gained a place in the Wimbledon finals yesterday. Miss Kathleen Stammers defeated Mrs. Palfrey Fabyan, of America, by 7-5, 2-6, 6-3 in a contest which was interrupted four times by rain.

The actual playing time was an hour and a quarter. The fourth interruption lasted 2 hours and 10 minutes, and few thought play would be resumed at all. Even the officials had almost despaired of further play, and they would probably have sent round the "No more play to-day" notices at 6 o'clock. But a few minutes before that hour the drizzle stopped.

At once the tarpaulin covers were removed from the court and not only this match finished, but Miss Alice Marble, of America, joined Miss Stammers in the final by one of the quickest victories ever recorded at Wimbledon. She beat Mrs. Sperling, of Denmark, 6-0, 6-0 in 19 minutes.

How far the interruptions affected the tense first battle it is difficult to say. The points at which they arrived suggest that they had no adverse results for Mrs. Fabyan. She was 1-4 down in the first set when the first stoppage came. She won the next game after resuming, and pulled up from 2-5 to 4-5 before yielding the set.

The next delay came at 1—love to Mrs. Fabyan and deuce. She won the next two points to be 2-0 before the players had again to run to shelter.

Mrs. Fabyan proceeded to 4—love and to 5-2 before the long wait, braved by many more than half the 13,000 crowd present, was enforced on pent-up players who, long before it was up, must have debated whether they would ask to be allowed to begin all over again or resume on the morrow at the critical stage at which they had left off.

WINNER BETTER THAN EVER

One clear impression remained from the painfully drawn out encounter. Such fiery tennis deserved to be sunlit, and that the thread had thus to be broken will be regretted by all who saw this lively display of women's lawn tennis.

Miss Stammers was at the top of her form. I would say that at times she touched greater heights than ever before.

Her forehand drive, the most powerful weapon in her armoury, worked almost to perfection. With it she raked the corners of the American's court, clipped the sidelines with deeply angled cross-court shots, and occasionally found the narrow opening for the pass when Mrs. Fabyan was in her favourite volleying position.

To do that was an achievement. Mrs. Fabyan showed that she is not only the neatest and nimblest forecourt player of all women, but her anticipation of Miss Stammers's counter thrusts was at times uncanny. It was, therefore, to a large extent, the English forehand against Miss Stammers' may also claim a service superiority.

DEFENCE V. POWER

Mrs. Fabyan could not, of course, keep up a non-stop volleying attack. For many rallies she was compelled to stay back, pitting her skillful defence and fleetness of foot against the pace and power of that raking forehand drive. Her strategic use of the lob, not only in moments of stress, but also as a means to turn the point of attack, was excellent.

Some of the rallies were entrancing, and each interruption seemed like taking a succulent sweet out of a small boy's mouth just when he was enjoying the full measure of it.

Though Miss Stammers secured a 4—love lead in the first set, the games were by no means easily come by. Mrs. Fabyan was within a point of the second, had 5 game points in the third, and another for the fourth.

What could be closer than that? She checked the unhappy sequence by holding her third service game in the rain, and after a quarter of an hour's delay captured Miss Stammers for 2-4. The English girl's reply to this was to increase the pace of her drives. A manlike overhead kill helped in the capture of Mrs. Fabyan's service game for 5-2 and then the battle was at its hottest.

STROKE OF LUCK

Mrs. Fabyan punished some weak second services, and surged up to the net on her own service. So excellent was her anticipation that her racket seemed as a magnet to the ball, and although she moved swiftly about the court she never appeared to have to hurry.

She drew level at 5—all, and if a net-cord stroke, one of many that her top-spin forehand luckily gathered, had not come to Miss Stammers' aid in the next game, she might not have won the set. But Miss Stammers' reprisal was a worthy one. The forehand was again the predominant stroke in some fine driving bouts, and England was soon a set up.

It was now Mrs. Fabyan's turn, between showers, to reach 4—love. Though she began the set with two double faults, the tennis was even better, the rallies even keener, and the games still wavering around deuce. Miss Stammers won two long deuce and 'vantage games, and then Mrs. Fabyan went out.

But the rain was not falling heavily, and with the match all square, the dismal tarpaulins were again drawn over the court, this time for more than two hours.

BRILLIANT LAST SET

It might have been thought that the weary wait would have dulled the players' nerves, but the third set was probably the best of all. Certainly it was Miss Stammers' best. She won the first two games, held a very close one on her service to keep the advantage at 3-1, and then succumbed to some brilliant American volleying and a few brilliant passing strokes when Miss Stammers herself tried to force home a net attack.

So it was 3—all, but it was Mrs. Fabyan's last thrust. Miss Stammers went out triumphantly from that point, losing only four more points, and a still longer and more justly watched for the full house that her encephalic earlier chapters and then went home in despair.

LIGHTNING VICTORY

Miss Marble's lightning victory was astonishing. Mrs. Sperling could win only 9 points in the first set and 5 in the second.

The Danish woman's first service was contemptuously crashed to glory. It was the threatening gesture. The American, with sweeping drives of tremendous pace and power to the far corners of the court, scarcely met a counter after that from a player reputed to be one of the stoutest and fleetest retrievers in the game.

Mrs. Sperling was rendered completely helpless against the storm of drives and volleys that were rained on her. She was never allowed to get into her stride. It should be a great final between Miss Marble and Miss Stammers to-morrow.

The meeting was virtually saved from a continuation into the third week by squeezing in the men's doubles semi-final before dark. Cooke and Algis in partnership reached another final at the expense of the great French veterans, Borotra and Brugnon, whom they beat 6-1, 3-6, 6-2, 6-3.

One imagines that the slight dampness of the surface and one heavy fall affected Borotra, who still feels the knee injury he received in a sliding accident last winter. However that may be, he was at a discount against the quick-fire American volleys.

There must be an Anglo-American final in this event. C. E. Hare and F. H. D. Wilde, the British Davis Cup pair, won a fourth round match against the Yugoslavians, Puncce and Mitic, 6-1, 6-1, 7-5, and they meet another home pair, J. S. Olliff and R. A. Shaves in the semi-final to-day.

Grace Allen, featured with Warren William, Ellen Drew, Kent Taylor and Judith Barrett in S.S. Van Dine's "The Grace Allen Murder Case," Faranoux's comedy-mystery, now showing at the Queen's and Alhambra Theatres, turns detective and even amuses herself with her insane deductions.

Latest Beach Wear

For Seascapades

RAIN or shine, our beaches won't want for colour this summer. Every bathing girl can have all the colours of the spectrum in her swim suit, and what could be more exhilarating than gorgeous tropical colouring as a change from the trim, prim office clothes in dark colours that Miss X and Miss Y wear most of the year round for daily-breading.

We advise them to indulge in all the colour they can on holiday, for colour should be as much a part of the summer change as sea breezes and sunshine—it accentuates the contrast from the daily round.

So this year, instead of conventional navy and white, blue and red, and an occasional splash of green, South Sea Island glamour, full of coral reds, azure blues, palm greens and sun-glow yellows.

These all-wool "bathers" have been printed by quite a new process, so that a very wide range of colours can be used, and they are absolutely fast to sea and sun.

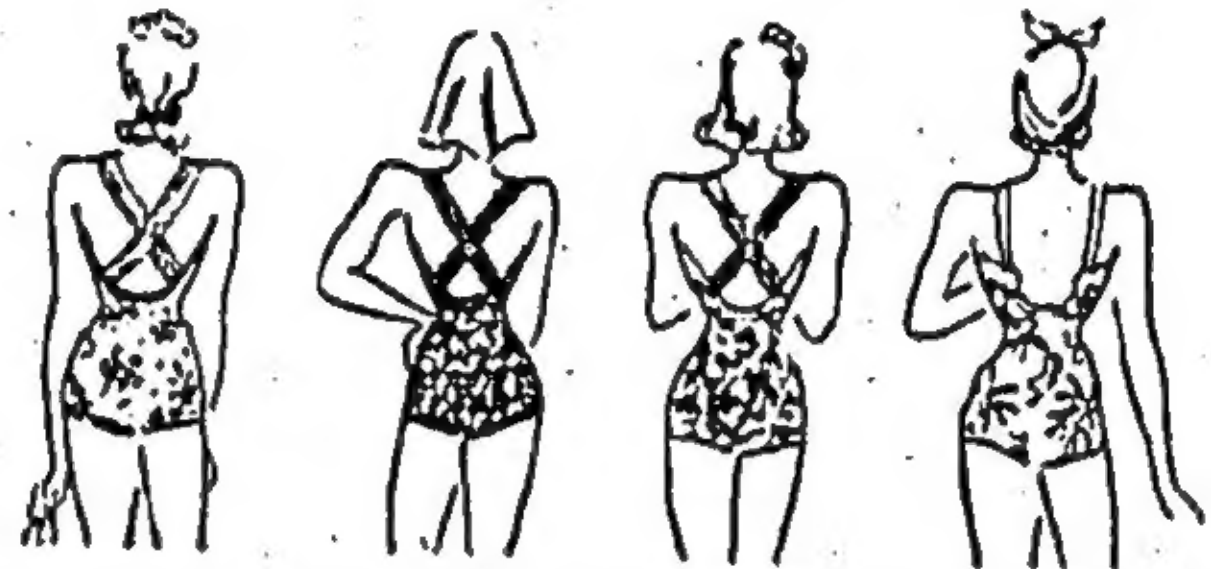

First comes a suit with green ground floral-patterned in coral pink, blue, yellow and white. It's made with a latex bust line and front skirt. The latex bust line is flattering to the figure, as well as giving fit and comfort.

Next suit is printed with all the under-the-sea glories of a tropical island? There are seaweeds of many colours, and fish of a dozen shades and shapes. This also has the latest bust line and back and a front skirt.

The cross-over brassiere top is specially attractive on the third bath. This is in white, with an all-over design of colourful galleons, and elastic at bust line, back and legs makes for perfect fit.

Last, and gayest of all, is a suit with coral ground patterned in palm trees, South Sea maidens, flowers and birds, in dazzling array. The white, wool-ribbon shoulder straps are adjustable, the wool-ribbon being slotted through to lie in a bow in front. It also has elastic at the bust line and a front skirt.

The little line sketches show you just what the back of each of these pure wool bathers looks like. They're grand both for sun and sea bathing.

These Tennis Parties

THERE is a singular belief inherent in most hostesses that they have only to get their husbands to trace wavering white lines upon the lawn, erect a net, buy a dozen tennis balls, and command the first dozen people who come to her mind to "come over for tea and tennis," in order to ensure the most successful kind of social and sporting afternoon.

Personally, I dislike tennis parties, although, like the majority of us, from that very first afternoon when I responded to the wheedling, "Do come, we're having a few people along for tennis on Saturday," I continue to rally to the call without a smile on my face. And yet, how absurdly funny it all is.

You accept; you don your clean flannels; take train or car, and arrive to find the traditional scene. There is the court all rolled and marked; there is the net slightly sagging and calling for that solemn business with two racquets; there is the non-playing hostess sitting under a tree with her supposedly playing husband, who intends to be in one every possible set.

There, too, are your fellow-partners in the rout—the tigers (craggy-looking fellows with important blazers), the tigresses (brown, sleeky ladies with rolled socks, unpowdered noses, and a couple of racquets apiece), the handmaids (like oneself a job lot of men and girls in white), and the rabbits, terror-stricken youths and maidens with occasional racquets and an appalling consciousness of the hungry tigers and their mates nearby.

Spun Racquets

For a while the talk is general, and then the host says, "Well, what about starting?" Everyone starts edging away from the court deprecatingly, at the same time intent upon being in the first set. Then, after everyone has said "No fear, not the first set for me," racquets are spun and four players find themselves facing one another with twitching smiles. Then the chorus begins by the first to say, "Well, how'll we play? I'll tell you frankly, this is my first game this year."

Racquets are spun again for partners, and again to decide about ends, and the attacking pair thrust balls at each other imploringly, with "You serve first," and "No, really, you do, please," and the tennis party opens according to ritual with a majestic double fault.

The set wears away, and the players chaff one another, and the host fetches balls from flower-bed and road, and the other guests listen politely to their hostess and gnaw their nails as the vintage set of deuce games potters 10-14, 10 all, 10-15, and on, on, on.

But at last it is over, and again nobody wishes to play, and all cry earnestly, "I'll sit this one out," and racquets are twirled, and another set begins, and the host still out of it goes on fetching stray balls, and the whole thing is over in about five minutes, a deceitful tiger and tigress having been opposed to two perfectly honest rabbits who were just as bad as they said they were, and who wander dazedly off the court.

Then the hostess says, "Now, who hasn't played? You haven't, Miss Sims, and you haven't, Mr. Crane, but everyone else has." At once bashfulness sets in again and reluctance to be favoured. But the tigers of the last set are selected, since the set was so short, and the same thing happens again, and everyone is under the trees in five minutes, feeling that the first lot, whose turn it is to play, are having very much the best of it, having run their opening set to 34 games.

They do play again and keep it up all tea time, having now learned the crafty tricks which keep a set going. Then, when tea is over (a draughty business, under the trees), the inevitable happens and the host, itching to be at it, cries, "Now, what about a men's four, eh?" The ladies settle into their chairs. The high spot of the day has arrived. The gods are in their frolics. A men's four.

And the men, however bad they may be, are conscious of what is expected of them, and with steel gusto they proceed to slash, lunge, jump, crouch, strut, aim, drive, and dash the ball between their eyebrows all to no great purpose beyond that of causing the odd rabbit out to take up a position in the road with a landing net for fishing balls out of the stream.

Then it is over, and everyone starts having return matches, and it is recalled that the women haven't had a four, and they have one, and more return matches are played, and a freshly assorted men's four gets going.

Twilight falling finds the finale to all tennis parties in progress—a dashing single between the two worst rabbits, who, taking the opportunity afforded by everyone put-

Sewing Aids

A FEW items, not generally found in work baskets, may be usefully included. For sharpening scissors, a square of emery paper is ideal. A mill file is useful for tucking under small seams on thin materials. The ordinary darning mushroom is too big for children's socks and other small items. A large empty cotton reel serves the purpose well.

At the bottom of the basket keep a small tin of talcum powder. A little sprinkled on the fingers now and then, particularly when sewing out-of-doors, in hot weather, prevents them from becoming sticky. In a prominent position near the top of the basket keep a magnet. There is no quicker way of recovering lost needles and pins than by pushing it round the basket or over the floor.

Iced Coffee

A DELICIOUS hot-weather drink is iced coffee. This can be made with the least trouble, simply by taking a small tin of café au lait and diluting it with cold water according to the directions. Pour the diluted café into a cocktail shaker or large stoppered jar, and shake with one or two spoonfuls of vanilla ice-cream until frothy.

Pour into tall glasses, add a dab of whipped cream if liked, and serve. If it is not required at once, keep the mixture in a refrigerator or ice box. Add the cream just before serving.

Hot Weather Hints

ON hot, sticky evenings, don't take a cold bath; it will only make you hotter. Take a tepid one just before you go to bed, and then pat your skin dry with a towel. Use a fresh-smelling variety of bath salts or bath essence. During the daytime, lighten your make-up. A good idea is to dilute your usual liquid foundation with a little skin tonic, so that your face is prevented from becoming too greasy. Give the feet a cooling treatment. Rub iced astringent on the heels and arches, and spare a little time to massage them before you retire at night—it is well worth it.

Don't try putting new make-up on old—it invariably clogs the pores. Anne Brook

Skilful Mending

IT is annoying when a favourite pair of stockings suddenly springs a ladder, or a large hole, or when a well-liked dress or coat gets torn, for the repair is generally obvious unless we are very careful about it.

Here are several ways in which mending may be almost invisible. A mended ladder is less noticeable when a very small tuck is made on the wrong side, then the laddered part cut away as closely as possible to the stitching. On the right side it looks like a flaw, which is less obvious than a darn—or we hope so! Always use a very fine needle and mending-silk that matches perfectly, and trim with a sharp pair of embroidery scissors, being careful not to cut the stitches, or another ladder will start.

Holes in the heels and toes may be patched if you always keep handy a few old stockings of various shades, and use them to cut patches slightly larger than the hole to be mended. Trim the ragged edges of the hole. Place the patch under the hole, and run-stitch it all round, about one-eighth of an inch from the edge, making the smallest possible stitches on the right side, and, of course, using matching silk. Run-stitch again round the extreme edge of the hole, or slip-stitch the edge to the patch, using very small stitches. You will find this method much neater and more durable than a darn.

Stockings that have sprung in the foot in the wash can have a new piece added in the same way.

Tears in Clothes

Jagged tears in clothes can be mended practically invisibly in this way.—Turn the garment inside out and lay flat on the ironing table, with the damaged part uppermost. Carefully draw the edges together so that the broken ends of the threads come together, but do not overlap. Pin or tack them through to the ironing blanket to prevent slipping, then secure with strips of adhesive tape, cut half an inch longer than the tear. Press lightly with a warm iron. If carefully done the mend will be invisible on the right side.

A hole can be patched in the same way if you have a piece of the material. Be careful that the grain of the patch follows the same direction as that of the garment. It is best to cut the edges quite straight all round the hole.

Take the patch in position on the wrong side of the garment. Turn over to the right side, tack once again, then, with matching cotton, or better still with strands of he natural material run-stitch along the grain of the material, taking the stitches through the double material, and just over the edge of the hole. Make very small stitches, and work from the right side so that you can keep your lines straight. The patch should die about a quarter of an inch larger all round, this provides for any pull on the patch. Don't pull the stitches too tight.

When finished, turn to wrong side, and press with warm iron over a damp cloth.

Turn Net Curtains

Holes can be patched invisibly in net curtains, if you have a piece of the same net, and matching cotton. Cut the edges of the tear straight. Lay curtain flat on the table, right side down, and place patch in position. This should be about a quarter of an inch larger all round. Match up the holes, then tack in position all round. Over-sew the two thicknesses together, keeping to the lines.

Afterwards carefully cut away the loose edges on both sides of the patch. For better security a second line of overcasting can be worked. Use sharp embroidery scissors for trimming. Press well on the wrong side and the patch will be invisible. That is much better than darning a large surface, but it is essential to see that the holes correspond, and the lines run straight.

Bit Of Their Own Medicine

Germans Object To Propaganda

LONDON, July 20. ACCORDING to the "Evening Standard," Sir Neville Henderson, British Ambassador to Berlin, has requested the British Government to use its influence to induce Commander Stephen Kling-Hall to desist from his propaganda in Germany by means of news-letters, which he sends to all parts of the world, and which recently formed the subject of a biting six-column attack by Dr. Josef Goebbels in the German press. The paper asserts that the Ambassador pointed out that propaganda of this nature rendered his own position very difficult, and that its cessation was an indispensable condition of any improvement in Anglo-German relations. The paper also claims that from this, some Cabinet members draw the inference that Sir Neville Henderson still believes in the possibility of a revival of the appeasement policy. Trans-Ocean.

Churchill Has Opposition

Diehards Don't Want Him In Cabinet

LONDON, July 20. A NUMBER of Conservative and National Liberal members of the House of Commons have pledged themselves to unconditional support of the Prime Minister, Mr. Chamberlain and his policy. The members of the group regard it as their foremost task to frustrate the inclusion of Mr. Winston Churchill in the Cabinet. The group, which is headed by Mr. S. Liddell, originally consisted of eight Conservative M.P.s, who were joined to-day by two National Liberal Members. Mr. Liddell has announced that only such members of the Commons would be admitted to the group who would accept Chamberlain's leadership without questioning, and who would pledge themselves to support the Prime Minister and his policy unconditionally. Mr. Winston Churchill, it is reported, this afternoon again had a long conversation with Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax. Trans-Ocean.

Women in Court Charged With Fighting

With part of their dresses in tatters and one of them displaying teeth marks on her right hand, two married women, Tam Kwan-ying, 43, and Yeung Sau-king, 21, were charged before Mr. R. Edwards at the Central Magistracy yesterday with disorderly conduct.

According to the charge, the women were alleged to have been fighting. A similar charge was preferred against another woman, Tam Yui, who was on bail of $25, but failed to appear in Court.

An order for her arrest was issued by the Magistrate. "Fights appear to start in this district on the slightest excuse," said Sergt. Pockson, who prosecuted. "This is the fourth or fifth reported to us in that vicinity during the past month."

"There are Puntis, Shanghai and Chiu Chow people in the district, and before you know where you are, a squabble develops into a clan fight." Describing the incident which brought the two women into Court, Sergt. Pockson said that the two women in court visited Tam Yui at the latter's home in Ming Yuen Street.

The purpose of the visit was to retrieve some belongings left there by a relative. The three women quarrelled and a fight ensued. The charges against Tam and Yeung were remanded until the third woman could be brought into court.

LATE NEWS

Claims 549 Planes Downed

HSINKING, July 21.—A total of 549 Soviet aircraft have been shot down and destroyed on the ground by Japanese air forces during the clashes near the border between Manchoukuo and Outer Mongolia since the first Nomonhan incident at the end of May up to July 18, an official Japanese check-up claims. As the result of the recent hostilities, the Soviet Far Eastern Air Force has Japanese sources suffered a "crushing blow." During the period of one month between June 19 and July 18, 488 Soviet planes were downed in air duels or destroyed on the ground, although the loss of 40 planes has not definitely been ascertained. The Soviet losses between the first Nomonhan incident at the end of May and June 18, totalled 61 of which 2 are not ascertained.—Domei.

Press Campaign

TOKYO, July 21.—The Japanese Press campaign of intimidation continues. The "Kokumin Shimbun" declares that the acceptance of the British counter-proposal would mean that the Anglo-Japanese conversations had been allowed to destroy the meaning of the "sacred war" Japan is conducting in China. It is up to the Japanese, says the paper, to maintain its attitude of forcing British acceptance of the Japanese demands until Britain has been brought to her knees. The "Asahi Shimbun" says that whether the Tokyo conversations are indefinitely suspended or ruptured entirely depends on the British attitude to-day. The "Nichi Nichi Shimbun" declares that the best way for Britain to save a complete loss of face is simply to cast off its "crass" misconception.—Reuter.

"Progress Towards Agreement"

TOKYO, July 21.—"Some progress has been made towards an agreement," a Japanese communiqué to this effect was issued this afternoon after to-day's conversations had been adjourned.—Reuter.

Guerilla Activity

TOKYO, July 21.—The Peiping-Hankow Railway tunnel at Wusheng-Kwan is said to have been badly damaged by Chinese mobile units. As a result all traffic between Hankow and Sinyang has been held up, states a Chinese despatch.—Reuter.

To Confirm Agreement

TOKYO, July 21.—The agreement reached at this morning's conversations will be formally confirmed to-morrow morning, after the British Ambassador has reported fully to London.—Domei.

No Transactions

Shanghai, July 21. The yuan, apparently found at least a temporary bottom at 4d. or 7½ U.S. cents this morning, later rallying to 4½d. or 8 U.S. cents.

However, business circles generally voice extreme uncertainty as to the immediate outlook while foreign dealings have been brought to a standstill. One reliable banking source expressed the opinion that the rumoured plan for the foreign banks to issue their own currency locally is not likely to materialise owing to the many conflicting political interests.—United Press.

Socony Plant Occupied

HANKOW, July 20.—The American Consulate to-day received a telegram saying that on July 1 the Japanese occupied the Standard Vacuum Oil Company's installation at Chenglingki, 125 miles above Hankow at the junction of the Yangtze and Shan rivers. The reports said the Japanese evicted the Chinese staff and lowered the American flag.

The Standard Vacuum headquarters at Shanghai said they have received no information in this respect. They said the staff at Chenglingki is two watchmen and there are no stocks there at present.—United Press.

To-day Is War Anniversary

Austrian Ultimatum To Servians

TO-DAY—JULY 21—is the twenty-fifth anniversary of an event which, a fortnight later, plunged the world into war. On July 21, 1914, Austria-Hungary presented an ultimatum to Servia, demanding the suppression of agitation and the punishment of certain officials and officers said to have been implicated in the intrigue that resulted in the Sarajevo assassinations. Not until July 24 was it generally realised that Europe was on the verge of war. Right up to the end of July few people believed that Britain would have any interest in the dispute. On August 4 we declared war on Germany.

In Hongkong, the "Telegraph" appears to have been the only newspaper which commented on the Austro-Hungarian ultimatum. In view of subsequent events, the opinion of the Editorial writer in the issue of July 22, 1914, is worth reprinting: "How will Europe's sympathy go, in connection with the troubled situation which has arisen where Austria and Servia are concerned?" he asked.

"Considering the horrible tragedy at Sarajevo a week or two ago, one may well say that there is something to be wiped off the slate; that Austria is fully justified in demanding satisfaction up to the hilt."

"But—and we have asked the question before—can any European Power nowadays quarrel with a small country, without the risk of a general war?"

"Everyone is asking what attitude Russia will take," says Reuter and—in a later message—'Germany will suffer no third party to intervene between Austria and Servia.'

"What other construction can one put on this sort of thing than that a general European war is imminent?"

"One's sympathies very naturally go to the aged Emperor of Austria, and one can only hope that trouble may yet be averted."

Danzig Not Worth World Conflict

LISBON, July 13. "The new Spanish regime is neither Italian nor German," Generalissimo Francisco Franco declared in an interview published to-day, by the "Diario de Noticias."

"The new Spanish State will be Spanish and is even now preparing an important social programme," he added. "I do not believe in war and I refuse to believe in war," he said in taking up international affairs.

"I see in the world to-day no question that cannot be solved by diplomatic and peaceful methods. It is hardly worthwhile for Europe to fight over Danzig."

"Spain is engaged in reconstruction work for which she needs peace. In the event of war, Spain will try as much as possible to remain neutral and will remain neutral so long as her territory, her honour and her vital interests are not affected," the Generalissimo was reported to have said.—Havas.

CARRY YOUR LICENSE

Drivers of motor cars would be well-advised to carry their licenses with them from now onwards.

As from to-morrow morning, traffic police are swooping down on all cars in a search for unlicensed vehicles or drivers.

Prosecutions will be instituted against all car owners or drivers who have not renewed their licenses. If licensed drivers are unable to produce their licenses upon demand, they will have to personally visit the Traffic Office within 24 hours of being held up.

Cars must have their license discs behind the lower left hand corner of the windscreen.
